Background: There is some concern that a shortage of qualified teachers is developing in Washington schools. The supply of teachers is affected by the fact that there is competition for college graduates from business and other professions. With respect to demand, it is predicted that there will be an increase in the number of children coming of school age. In Washington, this problem is aggravated by the growing influx of new families from other states and foreign countries.

Summary of Substitute Bill: The teachers recruiting future teachers program is created. Participating teachers will make presentations to high school classes discussing the rewards and challenges of teaching. Interested students may meet monthly for four months with a participating teacher for follow-up discussions on the issues in teaching.

Substitute Bill Compared to Original Bill: The appropriation was removed and a null and void provision added.

Fiscal Note: Requested February 20, 1991.

Appropriation: Removed. However, the bill is null and void unless funded in the budget.

Effective Date of Substitute Bill: Ninety days after adjournment of session in which bill is passed. However, the bill is null and void unless funded in the budget.

Testimony For: The purpose of the bill is to encourage more students to enter the teaching profession. The program was started in the Highline School District and has expanded to four other school districts. Washington will experience a severe teacher shortage so recruiting is very important. It is a program that allows enthusiastic teachers to talk to 10th grade students every year. The program helps change public perception of the teaching profession and is one of the cheapest and most effective ways to improve education.

Testimony Against: None.
