Background: Under current law the Joint Select Committee on Water Resource Policy will expire on July 1, 1991. The committee was created in 1988, chapter 47, Laws of 1988, to "study the fundamentals of water resource policy of the State," and to make recommendations to the Legislature regarding procedures for allocating water resources, prioritization of the use of water, and recommendations for revisions to existing law as needed.

In 1990 the Joint Select Committee sponsored legislation, ESHB 2932, codified in chapter 90.54 RCW, calling for comprehensive water resource planning on a regional basis throughout the State, through a cooperative planning process involving state, local, and tribal governments and interested parties. Significant progress has been made to implement ESHB 2932. A comprehensive planning process was developed, and regional planning will soon be initiated in two pilot regions in the State.

Members of the Joint Select Committee participated in the development of the planning process and continue to monitor its progress. The committee sponsored legislation this session, SB 5736 and HB 2026, to further implement the requirements of ESHB 2932. Continued legislative involvement is anticipated as results in the two pilot regions are evaluated.

Summary of Bill: The Joint Select Committee on Water Resource Policy is extended through June 30, 1993. The committee will monitor the implementation of comprehensive water resource planning and data management required by chapter 90.54 RCW. The committee will work with state, tribal, and local governments and interested parties to identify issues and to develop recommendations to the Legislature regarding water resource needs. The committee will report annually to the Legislature.

Effective Date: Ninety days after adjournment of session in which will is passed.
