Background: PART I (sections 101-131): State law enacted in 1990 and 1991 made local transit agencies in King, Pierce and Snohomish Counties responsible for high capacity transit (HCT) system planning, construction and operation in the Puget Sound region. An HCT system is defined as a "system of public transportation services within an urbanized region operating principally on exclusive rights of way, and the supporting services and facilities necessary to implement such a system, including high occupancy vehicle lanes, which taken as a whole, provides a substantially higher level of passenger capacity, speed and service frequency than traditional public transportation systems operating principally in general purpose roadways."

The law prescribes: (a) processes for evaluation of HCT systems; (b) requirements for what must be included in the HCT system plan presented to voters; and (c) certain local option taxes which, with voter approval, can be imposed to develop an HCT system. Pursuant to those statutes, planning for the HCT system is being governed by the Joint Regional Policy Committee composed of representatives of the four transit agencies (Metro, Pierce Transit, Community Transit and Everett Transit), and of the Department of Transportation (DOT).

Participants in the HCT planning process have identified a number of impediments to ultimate development of an HCT system under current law, including: the need for separate votes in each participating jurisdiction; the inability to provide HCT taxing district boundaries different from transit district boundaries; the complexity of revenue allocation and staging of the project among multiple jurisdictions; and inadequate bonding capacity among the transit agencies.

PART II (Sections 201-231): Since the 1960s, federal law has required urbanized regions to have a Metropolitan Planning Organization (MPO) representing cities and counties within the region. The MPO is responsible for developing a regional transportation plan and six-year transportation improvement program for the region as a prerequisite for obtaining and expending federal highway and transit funds within the region. The Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act (ISTEA) of 1991 provides for an enhanced role for MPOs in regional transportation matters. For urbanized areas over 200,000 population, this includes the selection of Surface Transportation Program projects.

The MPO for the Puget Sound region is the newly-restructured Puget Sound Regional Council (PSRC; formerly PSCOG) which encompasses King, Pierce, Snohomish and Kitsap Counties. It is a voluntary association of county and city governments established through interlocal agreements.

The federally-mandated MPOs are also designated as Regional Transportation Planning Organizations (RTPOs) under the state's 1990 Growth Management Act (GMA). Under this act, state requirements for regional transportation planning were overlaid on the federal requirements, including a requirement to certify that the transportation elements of local comprehensive plans conform with the GMA and are consistent with the regional transportation plan. Receipt of certain state funds, and imposition of certain taxes such as those for high capacity transit systems, are contingent upon the plans being consistent.

Through the passage of the GMA, transportation demand management (TDM), HCT authorization and other state enactments, the state's interest in regional transportation issues has been enhanced, and additional transportation funding sanctions have been imposed on local governments for non-compliance. However, no state agencies are voting members of MPOs.

Summary of Substitute Bill: PART I: Contiguous counties having populations of 400,000 or more (King, Pierce and Snohomish) are authorized to create a Regional Transit Authority (RTA) which would have responsibility to plan, construct and operate a high capacity transit system within the region. Formation of an RTA requires participation of at least two contiguous counties, which would opt to participate by resolution of the county legislative authority.

The RTA would be governed by a board made up of local elected officials with membership proportionate to county population; appointment of city officials must be proportionate to incorporated population. The secretary of the Department of Transportation would serve as a non-voting member, but could be given voting status by the board. Appointments from each county would be made by the county executive, with council approval; at least 50 percent of the appointees from each county must serve on a transit agency board.

A two-thirds majority of governing board membership would be required for major decisions of the board, defined to include: System plan adoption and amendment; system phasing decisions; annual budget adoption; authorization of annexations; modification of board composition; and executive director employment.

The initial boundaries of the RTA would be based on the system plan developed by the Joint Regional Policy Committee (predecessor to the RTA), to include the largest urban growth area in each county.

The authority is given powers to design, construct and operate an HCT system within its borders.

Taxing authority currently granted to transit agencies for HCT purposes is transferred to the RTA (1.0 percent sales tax; .8 percent motor vehicle excise tax; $2/month employer tax). Bonding authority is provided the authority--up to 1 1/2 percent of assessed valuation, and with voter approval, 5 percent). The authority may also create local improvement districts (LIDs).

PART II: The Puget Sound Regional Council (the federally-mandated Metropolitan Planning Organization for King, Pierce, Snohomish and Kitsap Counties) is recognized in state law as the state-authorized Regional Transportation Planning Organization (RTPO). In order to receive the allocation of state planning funds for RTPOs, the council must (a) provide voting membership on its executive board to the state departments of Transportation and Community Development, and to the two largest ports within the region; and (b) assure that at least 50 percent of the city- and county-elected officials on the board are also members of transit agency boards.

In addition to the duties already prescribed by state and federal law with regard to regional transportation planning, the council is directed to develop, in coordination with cities and counties, guidelines and principles that provide direction for development and evaluation of transportation elements of comprehensive plans. The council is also to assure that countywide planning policies and regional transportation plans are consistent.

After January 1, 1994, if the council finds the transportation element of an agency's comprehensive plan is inconsistent with the regional plan and program, the agency is precluded from receiving certain additional funds and from imposing certain taxes: Public transit accounts in the Transportation Fund; Urban Arterial Trust Account; Ferry System terminal improvements; local option fuel, vehicle license, parking and street utility taxes; increases in public port levies; and local transit sales tax increases.

A finding of inconsistency by the council can be appealed to the Growth Planning Hearings Board.

Substitute Bill Compared to Original Bill: PART I: The definition of high capacity transportation system is expanded to include "feeder systems and facilities" as part of supporting services and facilities.

PART II: The Puget Sound Regional Council (PSRC) is retained as the designated planning agency instead of creating a new state agency. Thurston County is dropped from the counties included in the organization. An additional port member is required on the governing council. An element is added to the regional transportation plan that sets forth the relationship between high capacity transit and other transit services.

The council must find the transportation elements of comprehensive plans or other plans inconsistent, rather than fail to make a finding of consistency, before sanctions are imposed. Appeals of council findings are made to the Growth Planning Hearings Board. Sanctions become effective in 1994 rather than 1992.

Fiscal Note: Available.

Effective Date of Substitute Bill: The bill takes effect July 1, 1992.

Testimony For: Local comprehensive plans and regional planning are tied together. Local involvement in the regional planning process is insured. Sanctions insure commitment to the process. A separate regional authority for high capacity transit better enables development of that system in Central Puget Sound.

Testimony Against: It should not be a state agency. Thurston County should not be included. Fares should fund more of the system.
