Background: State agencies and programs have a difficult time serving children and families needing assistance from more than one service provider. Problems faced by children and families typically involve several bureaucracies which each address a distinct, categorical problem.

Children and families which face multiple problems involving schools, alcohol or drug abuse, criminal activity, abuse, neglect or family disfunction, mental illness, developmental disability, poverty, or health problems pose a dilemma for organizations which administer categorical funds and organize around specific services instead of service populations.

Summary of Bill: A family policy council composed of the superintendent of Public Instruction, the secretary of the Department of Social and Health Services, the secretary of the Department of Health, the commissioner of Employment Security, the director of the Department of Community Development, four legislators, and a representative of the governor is created.

The council will solicit funding proposals from local consortiums to address the needs of children and families whose needs are not met by the programs of a single department. The council may submit a prioritized list of projects recommended for funding in the governor's budget. The Legislature may remove projects but may not change the order of priority. Funds for consortium projects will be identified by agencies represented on the family policy council from budget requests or existing appropriations for services to children and families.

The governor may take whatever action is necessary to avoid the duplication of efforts by any other councils, commissions, or committees related to children and families.

The Joint Select Legislative Committee on Juvenile Issues will prepare a study on: 1) establishing a network of local consortia that would be authorized to receive a transfer of authority and program funds for enumerated programs; 2) requiring local consortia to develop two-year plans; and 3) ways in which the local consortia could improve assistance that will strengthen the family. The task force will also assess the need to establish an institute for children and families at a college or university.

State agencies and local agencies and service providers working with developmentally disabled infants and young children will sign interagency agreements coordinating their services and activities. These agreements will provide maintenance of effort standards and service delivery agreements.

Fiscal Note: Available.

Effective Date: This bill takes effect July 1, 1992.

Testimony For: (Human Services): State agencies serving children and families should be encouraged to coordinate their activities. The Family Policy Council is a positive step in this direction.
