Staff: Chris Cordes (786-7117).

Background: If an injured worker dies as a result of his or her injury or illness, the Department of Labor and Industries or self-insured employer pays for burial expenses up to $2,000. Other monthly benefits are paid to the surviving spouse according to a statutory schedule.

Summary of Bill: The maximum amount paid for burial expenses by the Department of Labor and Industries or self-insured employer if an injured worker dies as a result of his or her injury or illness is changed from $2,000 to 200 percent of the average monthly wage (currently $3,947). The benefit amount paid immediately on the death of the injured worker to surviving members of the worker's family is changed from $1,600 to 100 percent of the average monthly wage (currently $1,973.50).

Fiscal Note: Available.

Effective Date: The bill contains an emergency clause and takes effect on July 1, 1993.
