Background: Between 1979 and 1990, the real median income of families with children fell by 5 percent. The poorest families experienced a 13 percent decrease in their median incomes. Partly based on declining family household incomes, mothers have steadily entered the work force. In 1970, 39 percent of children had a mother in the work force. By 1990, the proportion of children with mothers working had increased to 61 percent. Many children live in single parent households or households where both parents are employed. Children living in these households are often not under the care and supervision of an adult before and after school, and during times school is not in session. Children who are unsupervised before and after school are at greater risk of health and safety problems.

Summary of Bill: The Child Care Coordinating Council is directed to develop a plan for a statewide system of school aged child care programs. The plan will be submitted to appropriate legislative committees by December 1, 1993.

Fiscal Note: Requested.

Effective Date: Ninety days after adjournment of session in which bill is passed.
