Minority Report: Do not pass. Signed by 2 members: Representatives Lisk and Padden.

Staff: David Knutson (786-7146).

Background: Governor Gardner submitted a budget proposal for the 1993-95 biennium which will close Green Hill School and Eagle Lodge at the Naselle Youth Camp. The combined institutional capacity of juvenile institutions will be reduced by 112 beds.

Summary of Bill: Juvenile offenders committed to the Department of Social and Health Services may be transferred from juvenile institutions to community placements after serving 72 percent of their minimum term of confinement. Juvenile offenders released to the community may have to reside at a specific address, submit to electronic monitoring, participate in training or education activities, receive treatment, and obey other requirements.

Fiscal Note: Available.

Effective Date: Ninety days after adjournment of session in which bill is passed.

Testimony For: If juvenile offenders receive additional transition services when they leave the institution, they will be less likely to reoffend. The need for institutional beds will also be reduced.

Testimony Against: Juveniles should not have their sentences reduced to allow for the closure of institutional beds.

Witnesses: (Pro): Representative Leonard, prime sponsor; Larry Fehr, Washington Council on Crime and Delinquency; Pat Arthur, Evergreen Legal Services; Margaret Casey, Washington State Catholic Conference, The Children's Alliance and Washington Juvenile Court Administrators; John Turner, Mountlake Terrace Police; and (con) Mike Redman, Washington Association of Prosecuting Attorneys.
