Background: The State of Washington has provided protection and regulation of guide and services dogs under the "White Cane Law" since 1969. The White Cane Law provides totally or partially blind, hearing impaired, or otherwise physically disabled people the right to be accompanied by a guide or service dog into any public place without being required to pay an extra charge. It is illegal to deny or interfere with admittance to, or enjoyment of, any public facility by a person with an enumerated handicapping condition. State law related to guide and service dogs is inconsistent with the Americans with Disabilities Act enacted by Congress. Enforcement of laws requiring access to public and private facilities by persons with guide and service dogs is difficult under the White Cane Law.

Summary of Bill: Guide and service dogs will be referred to as dog guides and service animals. Enforcement of the access requirements for people with dog guides or service animals will be assumed by the Human Rights Commission. References to dogs in training are removed from the definitions of dog guide and service animal. The current statute prohibiting discrimination against disabled drivers at service stations is transferred from the White Cane Law to the Law Against Discrimination.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Not requested.

Effective Date: Ninety days after adjournment of session in which bill is passed.

Testimony For: The changes in state law proposed by this bill are necessary to comply with the Americans with Disabilities Act. These changes are needed to enable disabled people to have equal access to public and private facilities. These changes will help restaurant owners and other businesses serve disabled customers.
