Staff: Joe Hauth (786-7271).

Background: In 1994 and 1995, as part of regulatory reform, the Legislature made substantial changes to agency rule-making and the legislative review of rules. Additional changes were adopted in 1997 in E2SHB 1032.

Rule-Making Requirements.

General provisions. The Administrative Procedure Act (APA) details procedures agencies must follow when adopting rules. Generally a "rule" is any agency order, directive, or regulation of general applicability which:

- (a) subjects a person to a sanction if violated; or
- (b) establishes or changes any procedure or qualification relating to:
 - agency hearings;
 - benefits or privileges conferred by law;
 - licenses to pursue any commercial activity, trade, or profession; or
 - standards for the sale or distribution of products or materials.

The rule-making procedures include publishing notice of the proposed rule in the state register, sending a copy of the notice to persons requesting it and holding a hearing. For some types of rules, agencies must solicit comments and otherwise involve interested parties before publishing notice of a proposed rule. For each rule, an agency must maintain an official rule-making file that includes copies of all publications in the state register with respect to the rule.

Significant legislative rules. Before adopting a significant legislative rule, certain of the larger agencies must determine that the probable benefits of the rule exceed the probable costs and make other determinations. These agencies must also develop a rule implementation plan for a significant legislative rule describing how the agency intends to implement and enforce the rule, inform and educate affected persons about the rule, promote and assist voluntary compliance with the rule, and evaluate the rule. Significant legislative rules are most rules other than emergency rules, procedural and interpretive rules, and fee-setting rules. The Joint Administrative Rules Review Committee (JARRC) may also require that any rule of any agency be made subject to the significant legislative rules requirements. JARRC has 45 days after receiving notice of a proposed rule to make the requirements applicable.

Expedited process. An expedited repeal process allows agencies to repeal rules in an expedited manner if no one objects. Similarly, an expedited adoption process allows streamlined adoption of rules that have been the subject of a process involving substantial participation by interested parties before the development of the rule, rules which only correct typographical errors, and certain other types of rules. An agency may file for expedited adoption at any time, but is allowed only two filings (in April and October) of rules for expedited repeal.

Review of rules. Rules remain in effect until amended or repealed. The APA does not require agencies to review their rules. Under Executive Order 97-02, the Governor directed all executive agencies to review rules that have significant effects on businesses, labor, consumers, and the environment. The agencies must determine whether the rules should be retained, or amended or repealed, if they do not meet specified criteria. The criteria include whether the rule is necessary, whether it is providing the results that it was originally designed to achieve in a reasonable manner, whether it is clearly written, and whether the qualitative and quantitative benefits of the rule been considered in relation to its costs.

An agency must also review its policy and interpretive statements and similar documents to determine whether they must be adopted as rules, and must review its reporting requirements.

Economic impact statements. Under the Regulatory Fairness Act, agencies must prepare a small business economic impact statement when adopting a rule that imposes more than minor costs on businesses in an industry or if requested to do so by JARRC. Certain types of rules are exempt. The statement describes the reporting, record keeping, and other compliance requirements of the proposed rule, analyzes the costs of compliance, and addresses other matters. If the agency finds that the rule has a disproportionate impact on small businesses, the agency must reduce the costs on small businesses, where legal and feasible do to so.

Interpretive and Policy Statements. In addition to rules, agencies also issue other types of documents. An interpretive statement is a document titled "Interpretive Statement" that states an agency's interpretation of the meaning of a statute. A policy statement is a document titled "Policy Statement" that states an agency's current approach to the implementation of a statute. Unlike rules, interpretive and policy statements are advisory only. Agencies are encouraged to issue interpretive and policy statements and to convert long standing interpretive and policy statements into rules.

Legislative Review. JARRC selectively reviews rules and interpretive and policy statements. A person may also petition JARRC to review a rule or a policy or interpretive statement. If JARRC finds that a rule is not within the intent of the legislature or has not been adopted in accordance with all provisions of law, or that an agency is using an interpretive or policy statement in place of a rule, JARRC notifies the agency. A process is established for the agency to respond to JARRC's findings, and for JARRC to take further action. Ultimately, JARRC may recommend that the Governor suspend a rule.

JARRC is composed of eight legislators (four senators and four representatives, with no more than two members from each house from the same political party). The President of the Senate appoints the chair in even numbered years and the Speaker of the House appoints the chair in odd-numbered years.

A JARRC determination does not establish a presumption as to the legality or constitutionality of the rule in subsequent judicial proceedings.

Adjudicative Proceedings. When a state agency conducts a hearing that is not presided over by officials who are to render the final decision, the hearing must be conducted by an administrative law judge.

Summary of Bill:

Rule-Making Requirements.

General provisions. A notification requirement for certain rules is added. Within 200 days of the effective date of a rule that imposes additional requirements on businesses that may subject a person to a sanction if violated, an agency must make a good faith effort to notify businesses affected by the rule of the requirements and how to obtain technical assistance. Good faith means the agency at least notifies businesses in the standard industrial classifications of businesses affected by the rule that are registered with the Department of Revenue. Inadvertent failure to notify a specific business does not invalidate a rule.

Significant legislative rules. The rule implementation plan for significant legislative rules is expanded. The plan must describe how the agency will 1) convene a meeting of interested persons affected by a significant legislative rule at least 20 days before the effective date to identify and determine how to resolve ambiguities and problem areas in the rule; and 2) provide agency training.

The time period for JARRC to decide whether to impose the significant legislative rule requirements is extended from 45 to 75 days.

Expedited process. Agencies may file proposals for the expedited repeal of rules at any time, instead of only twice a year. The contents of the rule-making file is limited so that only citations to the notices in the register are required and not copies of all the register publications with respect to a rule.

Review of rules. Beginning July 1, 2001, each state agency must review its rules to determine if they should be retained, amended, or repealed. The rules reviewed and the criteria under which they are reviewed are the same as in Executive Order 97-02.

Consistent with the Executive Order, the agency must also review its policy and interpretive statements or similar documents to determine whether they must be adopted as rules, and must review its reporting requirements.

Each agency must report annually to JARRC on its progress in reviewing its rules, and must publish a summary of the report in the register. If JARRC receives a written objection within 90 days after publication, JARRC must determine whether the agency complied with the requirements. If JARRC finds that the agency did not comply, the agency has 120 days to receive approval from JARRC. If JARRC does not approve, the rule is deemed invalid.

Economic impact statements. An agency must prepare a local government economic impact statement when adopting a rule that imposes costs on local government. Certain types of rules are exempt. The statement must describe the reporting, record keeping and compliance requirements of the proposed rule and analyze the costs of compliance for local government. The Department of Community, Trade, and Economic Development must develop a guide to help agencies prepare the statements. Annually, an agency must submit to JARRC a list of rules for which it has prepared an economic impact statement and a summary of the costs.

Interpretive and Policy Statements. When a person requests a copy of a rule from an agency, the agency must identify any associated interpretive and policy statements or their equivalents (regardless of title), and provide copies of the statements upon request.

An agency may not issue a citation, civil penalty, assessment, or other sanction to a business for a rule violation if the agency issued a policy or interpretive statement (regardless of title) involving the same subject matter of the violation, unless the agency made a good faith effort to notify businesses likely to be affected by the statement at least 90 days prior to the issuance. Good faith means the agency at least notified businesses in the standard industrial classifications of businesses likely to be affected by the statement that are registered with the Department of Revenue when the notice is sent. Inadvertent failure to notify a specific business does not prohibit the issuance of a sanction.

Legislative Review. The composition of JARRC is modified. The members must appoint a ninth person, by majority vote, other than one of the eight members. The ninth person votes only in the case of a tie.

In addition to review of rules and policy and interpretive statements, JARRC may review statements that are the equivalent of policy and interpretive statements, regardless of title, to determine whether a statement constitutes a rule. If the committee finds that a statement constitutes a rule, it may also examine whether the statement is within legislative intent.

A JARRC suspension recommendation to the Governor that a rule be suspended because it does not conform with legislative intent or was not adopted in accordance with all applicable provisions of law establishes a rebuttable presumption in a proceeding challenging the validity of the rule that the rule is invalid. The burden of demonstrating the validity of the rule is then on the adopting agency.

A hearing held by the insurance commissioner must be conducted by an administrative law judge unless the person demanding the hearing agrees in writing to have an employee of the commissioner conduct the hearing.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Available.

Effective Date: Ninety days after adjournment of session in which bill is passed.

Testimony For: (Government Reform & Land Use) We continue to see abuses with use of documents. Some documents, such as regional directives and technical assistance bulletins, should be adopted as rules, and JARRC needs the authority to look at these. We need more detail in the implementation plans to identify problem areas before litigation. Continuing rules review is necessary so that only absolutely necessary rules are on the books. This bill is narrower than bills in the past. Agencies need to do a better job of letting people know what is required. It's very frustrating to be told you are in violation, but you don't know what the requirements are. JARRC needs a tie-breaking mechanism. In insurance matters, an independent ALJ (as opposed to an employee of the commissioner) will provide the needed appearance of fairness. Local governments are often regulated, and it would be helpful to see the costs of regulation.

(Appropriations) The Governor ordered agencies to implement Executive Order 97-02 with no cost. However, agencies that reviewed the proposed legislation identified cost impacts. The proposed legislation complements prior regulatory reform efforts. This legislation has been a collaborative process with the Governor. The existing process needs to be codified in law so a permanent system is in place. The criteria for rules review can be tightened. This bill will not cost more to implement and it will give people standards to evaluate rulemaking efforts.

The proposed changes to the bill should result in a much smaller impact on agencies in terms of scope, documentation, and reporting requirements. The goal is to achieve regulatory compliance. Adopting the rules review requirements in Executive Order 97-02 should reduce the significant impacts of rules review.

Testimony Against: (Government Reform & Land Use) We need experience under the executive order and ESHB 1010 before we make changes. Don't make the requirements so rigid that agencies can't provide assistance to people. Notifying all persons affected when a rule is adopted is unattainable (comment to original bill). The rules review provision is problematic because there may be unintended consequences if an agency inadvertently fails to review a rule. How can we provide copies of documents to people before citing them if we don't know who they are, such as unlicensed contractors? (comment to original bill). Don't further politicize JARRC (comment to original bill). Regarding insurance hearings, judges are expensive and not familiar with insurance issues. Look at problem rules rather than all rules and exempt federally mandated rules.

(Appropriations) HB 1010 was supported but balance is needed. This bill goes too far in that it is too hard to implement and is likely to result in significant litigation. The rules review criteria in Executive Order 97-02 were never meant to be put in statute. The goal is to make government more efficient; this bill goes in the opposite direction. State agencies have received their charge to improve regulatory activities. Past legislation has already resulted in many improvements in efficiency and effectiveness. There are real costs associated with this bill. The costs associated with conducting local government economic impact statements could be significant. The four-year rules review requirement is too short. The Office of the Insurance Commissioner (OIC) is singled out in this bill. The requirement for an administrative law judge for OIC hearings will be costly and impair the current hearings process.
