Background:

There are 14 regional transportation planning organizations (RTPOs) in Washington. Each RTPO has a policy board that provides direction on the implementation of their six-year transportation improvement program (TIP) and their regional transportation plan.

A regional transportation planning organization policy board is required to include cities, counties, port districts, transit districts, major employers, and the Department of Transportation (DOT). Several RTPOs provide information to their state legislators on RTPO functions, but it is not a state requirement.

The six-year TIP proposes regionally significant transportation projects and a financial plan that demonstrates how the program is to be funded. The six-year TIP is updated at least every two years, but can be amended during the interim.

The regional transportation planning process establishes standards for a regional transportation plan, coordination between RTPOs, and in conjunction with state planning efforts, identifies and plans improvements that are important to moving people and goods on a regional and statewide basis.

Summary of Bill:

The RTPO board membership is modified. One member from each caucus of the House of Representatives and State Senate is a board member. The legislators are selected by the Speaker of the House and President of the Senate, respectively. Additional members of the House of Representatives or the State Senate whose districts are within the boundaries of the RTPO are considered ex-officio, nonvoting board members.

The RTPOs are required to provide a schedule of their six-year TIP to state legislators within their boundaries. The schedule is to include decision process points, updates, and amendments to the six-year TIP.

Through the regional transportation planning process, and through state planning efforts, RTPOs are required to identify and jointly plan the most efficient strategy to address identified deficiencies, including investments in modal integration, in corridors that are important to moving people and goods on a regional and statewide basis.

EFFECT OF SENATE AMENDMENT(S): RTPO Board Membership is modified. Any member of the House of Representatives or the state Senate whose districts are within the boundaries of the regional transportation planning organization are considered ex-officio, nonvoting board members. Legislators are not precluded from becoming voting board members.

RTPO notice of publications to legislators is changed. RTPOs are required to provide notification of available publications to state legislators within their boundaries. Upon request by legislators, RTPOs are required to provide a schedule of their six -year Transportation Improvement Program (TIP). The schedule is to include decision process points, updates, and amendments to the six-year TIP.

A new section is added on statewide transportation planning. The state-owned facilities component of Washington's Transportation Plan is required to identify the most cost-effective combination of transportation investments that maximizes the efficient movement of people, freight, and goods within state transportation corridors. The comparison process must include all transportation modes, an analysis of public-private investments, and an analysis of the public, private, and social costs and benefits of transportation investments.
