Summary of Substitute Bill:

The Criminal Justice Training Commission and the Department of Social and Health Services will provide introductory and specialized training for law enforcement and child protective services staff who interview children. The Washington Institute for Public Policy will convene a group to develop a model written protocol for establishing multidisciplinary investigations. Each county will also adopt a written protocol for handling child abuse investigations. The local protocols will be adopted and in place by July 1, 2000.

The Department of Social and Health Services will operate up to three pilot projects involving child abuse and neglect investigations. The department will provide reports to legislative committees in December 1999 and December 2000. The department will provide a near verbatim record of disclosure interviews involving child sexual abuse cases.
