Background:

Article 3 of the Uniform Commercial Code applies to negotiable instruments. A check is a negotiable instrument, and is defined as a draft payable on demand and drawn on a bank, a cashier's check, or a teller's check.

If a check is dishonored due to nonpayment or nonacceptance, currently only the payee and the holder of the check have a remedy. The payee or the holder of a dishonored check is entitled to collect a reasonable handling fee. The holder of a dishonored check is also entitled to additional remedies if a notice of dishonor is sent to the drawer of the check and an affidavit of service is retained. These remedies include the cost of collection, interest, attorney fees, and damages of $300 or three times the face amount of the check, whichever is less.

Generally, collection agencies send a notice of dishonor on behalf of their client and collect the applicable fees. This practice has been challenged in a number of lawsuits, alleging a collection agency is not a "holder" of the check as defined in RCW 62A.1-201(20).

Summary of Bill:

The payee or person entitled to enforce the check under RCW 62A.3-301 may collect a reasonable handling fee.

The person entitled to enforce the check may send the notice of dishonor.

The person enforcing the check must retain the affidavit of service with the check.

Interest, collection costs, and attorneys' fees may not be recovered if the person enforcing the check or their agent, employee, or assign demands:

- (1) Interest or collection costs beyond those allowed by statute; or
- (2) Interest, collection costs, or attorney fees within 15 days of mailing the notice of dishonor; or
- (3) Attorneys' fees which have not been set by the court.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Not requested.

Effective Date: Ninety days after adjournment of session in which bill is passed.

Testimony For: Collections agencies frequently send a notice of dishonor on behalf of their clients. This bill clarifies that existing business practices are legal.

Testimony Against: None.

Testified: Judy Warnick, Washington Collectors Association.
