BACKGROUND:

(1) This law for state officers and employees.

An ethics public service law precludes state officers and employees from having interests that conflict with the discharge of their duties from accepting gifts from persons other than family members or persons with whom in independent family or social relationships.

Three separate laws exist for the three branches of state government. The commission, judiciary and executive branch each have a separate law and rules adopted with respect to state officers and employees of the judicial and state government. A nine-member legislative board created with authority to legislate and employees of five-member executive board created with authority to execute officer and employees.

Each of the three boards hear complaints filed against officers and employees under its jurisdiction in the laws. The staff of each board investigates the complaints and reduces investigation in the board determines whether there is a reasonable cause to believe a violation has occurred. It holds a public hearing on the merits if it determines reasonable cause exists.

After the public hearing, the board dismisses the complaint or finds that a violation has occurred. If a violation is found to have occurred, the board may order payment of damages that the state sustained, impose fines and/or that the officer be paid. In addition, the legislative and executive boards recommend that officer and employee be removed from the position, suspended or prosecuted.
