Background:

Inaccuracies in the Revised Code of Washington may occur in a variety of ways. Typographical, drafting, or grammatical errors may be made in bill drafts and floor amendments. A bill may change a particular term, or an entity may be renamed or abolished, and references to these terms or entities in other provisions of the code become inaccurate.

In addition, sections may be repealed, recodified, or amended in a way that changes their internal numbering. References to these sections or subsections in other provisions of the code then become incorrect. In 1999, the Legislature recodified many chapters from various titles into a new title - Title 79A. Internal cross-references in these recodified sections were not updated so that Title 79A contains many inaccurate cross-references.

There are a number of decodified sections in the code. Decodification of a section occurs when the Legislature passes two bills affecting a section, one that amends the section, and the other that repeals that same section.

Summary of Bill:

Technical corrections are made to various provisions of Titles 76, 78, 79, and 79A RCW, which relate to natural resources.

The technical corrections include changes to: correct grammatical, drafting, and typographical errors; correct inaccurate references to terms that have been changed or entities that have been abolished or renamed; remove obsolete language; alphabetize definitions; and correct inaccurate cross-references resulting from amendments, recodifications, vetoes, or repealers. In addition, several decodified and obsolete sections of the code are repealed.
