Background:

The Washington State Lottery Commission is authorized to regulate and conduct lottery games for the purpose of generating state funds to be used for the general welfare of the people. The commission adopts rules governing the type of games, price of tickets, number and size of prizes, location of sales, commission paid to sales agents, and other matters necessary for the efficient and economical operation of the lottery.

Legislative approval is required before the commission may enter into agreements with other states for shared games.

Initiative 728 requires that moneys in the lottery account be used for purposes of prizes, administrative costs, state reserves, school construction and student achievement, and retirement of the baseball stadium bond.

Summary of Bill:

The lottery commission is authorized to participate with other states to conduct shared lottery games in Washington for the purpose of generating funds for school construction. Moneys generated from shared games will be deposited in the common school construction fund. The phrase moneys generated from shared lottery games– is added to the list of funding sources for K-12 school construction.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Requested on February 26, 2001.

Effective Date: Ninety days after adjournment of session in which bill is passed.

Testimony For: State revenues for school construction are limited, and it is difficult to generate the expected amounts for education with the existing games. Neighboring states offer Power Ball and the lottery commission is always looking for ways to increase revenues for education. There are 5 million people on the borders of the state. Idaho directs all its lottery revenue to school construction. The commission gets requests regularly asking when a big game will be offered. States that participate in shared games regard the game as a state game with a bigger potential jackpot. Revenue anticipated from a shared game is between $8 million and $11 million annually. The need for school construction is growing and the multi-state games will generate more moneys to assist districts who are unsuccessful in passing construction bonds. No new equipment is needed and the software changes will be the same as for the new games added at the state-only level.

Testimony Against: The multi-state game would expand gambling and create an unfair advantage for the government, against which the nonprofit and private gambling groups can not compete. Rather than approving the big games, the Legislature should create an interim study to determine whether any group has an unfair advantage over another group in offering recreational gambling activities.
