Background:

Wildlife damage to crops is a concern to both farmers and the state. The director of the Department of Fish and Wildlife may pay up to $10,000 per claim for damages caused to crops by deer or elk. The department on occasion authorizes someone to hunt or haze problem deer or elk in an area where they are causing damage to crops. The department, however, contacts people from a statewide list for this purpose. This means that they don't always use a person who resides within the county to conduct the hunt. People who are not familiar with an area often are not as efficient or successful as persons who are familiar with an area.

Summary of Engrossed Substitute Bill:

The Department of Fish and Wildlife must maintain a list of persons holding valid wildlife hunting licenses, arranged by county of residence, who have indicated they are available to hunt deer or elk causing damage to crops. Individuals on the list must meet all the qualifications established by the department. The department must update the list at least once every three years.

The department must use the list when contacting people to help control game damage to crops. The department must make all reasonable efforts to use a resident of the county where the activity will occur before contacting a non-resident of the county. The department is required to rotate the names on the list in order to provide a fair distribution of the hunting opportunity. Hunters participating in these hunts must report their kills to the department. The department is required to include a summary of the wildlife harvested in these hunts in its annual game management reports.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Not Requested.

Effective Date: Ninety days after adjournment of session in which bill is passed.

Testimony For: Local people should be used to conduct this hunting or hazing activity because they know the territory, the herds, and the herd movements. Elk wipe out a large amount of pasture that livestock need, and continually break fences. A person unfamiliar with the area and the farmers may be bringing firearms too close to buildings, livestock, or people. The department supports the change. The landowner should be at the top of the list for who is called.

Testimony Against: None.

Testified: Representative Eickmeyer, prime sponsor; Jane Rose and Eleanor Camenzind, Washington Cattlemen's Association and Washington Farm Bureau; Neil Kayse, Washington Cattlemen's Association; Ed Owens, Hunter Heritage Council; and Bruce Bjork and John Broome, Department of Fish and Wildlife.
