The Omnibus Credentialing Act for Counselors requires the registration of counselors providing therapeutic counseling for a fee and provides for the professional certification of social workers, mental health counselors and marriage and family therapists.

Social workers, mental health counselors, and marriage and family therapists are certified by the Secretary of Health, and no such persons may represent themselves as certified with respect to their profession, without being certified and meeting specified education, training, and experience requirements, and passing examinations.

Applicants for certification must graduate from an accredited master's or doctoral degree educational program relating to the profession, complete two years supervised practice, and pass an examination.

Registered counselors and certified professional counselors must provide clients with accurate disclosure information concerning the practice, including education and therapeutic orientation.

The Mental Health Quality Assurance Council advises the Secretary in the administration of the chapter.

The Uniform Disciplinary Act governs the discipline of registered counselors and certified professional counselors for unprofessional conduct, and the Secretary of Health is the disciplining authority.

Summary of Amended Bill:

Advanced social workers, independent clinical social workers, mental health counselors, and marriage and family therapists are regulated and licensed by the Secretary of Health, and no such persons may represent themselves as licensed with respect to these professions, without being licensed and meeting specified education, training, and experience requirements.

The Secretary shall appoint a nine person advisory committee to advise in administering the licensing program, including rules, unprofessional conduct guidelines, and consumer complaints. The committee shall be composed of two members from each of the licensed professions and three representatives of the public to serve three-year terms.

Applicants for licenses as advanced social workers and independent clinical social workers must graduate from a master's or doctoral social work educational program, pass an examination, complete 36 hours of continuing education, and complete 3,200 or 4,000 hours of supervised experience, respectively.

Applicants for licenses as mental health counselors must graduate from a master's or doctorate program in mental health counseling, pass an examination, have 36 months full time counseling or 3,000 hours of supervised post graduate counseling, and complete 36 hours of continuing education.

Licensed counselors must provide clients with accurate disclosure information concerning the practice, including the counselor's education and therapeutic orientation.

The Secretary is given authority to administer the chapter, including rule-making authority, and the authority to charge licensing fees for meeting the costs of the program.

The Uniform Disciplinary Act governs the discipline of licensees, and the Secretary is the disciplining authority.

Counselors certified under current law and meeting requirements may be licensed without taking the examination.

Persons licensed in other states with substantially equivalent standards may be licensed in this state without taking the examination.

The chapter is not to be construed as permitting the administration of drugs, or practice of medicine or psychology.
