Background:

The Puget Sound crab pot fishery is a limited entry fishery with a 100 pot limit. All Puget Sound crab pots are required to be tagged, but no uniform system exists for the production, distribution, and monitoring of buoy tags. A uniform system of crab pot buoy tags could help distinguish crab pots between treaty shellfish fishers, recreational fishers, and the Puget Sound crab pot commercial fishers. Highly visible tags would also aid in the enforcement of the 100 pot limit.

The Department of Fish and Wildlife has proposed to buy the buoy tags and supply them to the crab fishing fleet, but the department does not have the authority to charge each crab fisher for the tags.

Summary of Amended Bill:

The Department of Fish and Wildlife is authorized to charge a fee to people who hold Dungeness Crab - Puget Sound fishery pot licenses to reimburse the department for producing Puget Sound crab pot buoy tags and the administration of a Puget Sound crab pot buoy program.

A Puget Sound crab pot buoy tag account is created in the State Treasurer's custody. All proceeds from the fees charged to licensees are deposited into the account, and expenditures may only be made upon authorization of the director or the director's designee. The account is subject to allotment reductions but no appropriation is necessary to make expenditures.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Available.

Effective Date of Amended Bill: The bill contains an emergency clause and takes effect immediately.

Testimony For: (Natural Resources) This will make it easier to enforce the 100 pot limit. People who abuse the limit affect the catch rate and the season closes before it would otherwise. The industry supports this because it levels the playing field. Recreational fishers are not affected.

Testimony For: (Appropriations) None.

Testimony Against: (Natural Resources) None.

Testimony Against: (Appropriations) None.

Testified: (Natural Resources) Senator Spanel, sponsor; Phil Anderson, Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife; and Steve Kuchin and Randy Richardson Puget Sound Crab Association.

Testified: (Appropriations) None.
