3 "NEW SECTION. Sec. 1. The Washington state institute for public 4 policy has completed numerous studies that provide data, trends, and 5 evaluations of community-based youth violence prevention projects.
6 Related research shows that healthy, stable families are often the best 7 line of defense against juvenile crime. A wide variety of research can 9 members of the legislature.

10 The joint legislative audit and review committee shall review and 11 analyze research, including research done by the Washington state 12 institute for public policy, that identifies programs that can be 13 implemented by local jurisdictions, are cost beneficial to the state, 14 and are effective at preserving families and reducing crime committed 15 by youth who are eleven to eighteen years of age. The joint 16 legislative audit and review committee shall report their analysis on 17 the success, cost benefits, and outcomes of the programs to the 18 legislature by September 1, 2005.

19 The joint legislative audit and review committee shall also develop 20 and report options regarding financial and other incentives that 21 encourage local government investment in community-based research 22 proven preventive and early intervention programs that reduce juvenile 23 crime and preserve families. Among the incentives that must be 24 considered are those that reimburse local governments for a portion of 25 the savings that accrue to the state as the result of local government 26 investment in such programs."
