

HOUSE BILL REPORT

HB 2596

As Reported by House Committee On:
Children & Family Services

Title: An act relating to early intervention services for children with disabilities.

Brief Description: Providing for early intervention services for children with disabilities.

Sponsors: Representatives Dickerson, Kagi, Kirby, Quall, Schual-Berke, Simpson, G., Tom, Kenney, McDermott, Boldt, Wood, Linville, Chase, Lantz, O'Brien, Haigh, Conway, Morrell, Miloscia, Kessler, Santos and Clibborn.

Brief History:

Committee Activity:

Children & Family Services: 1/28/04, 1/29/04 [DPS].

Brief Summary of Substitute Bill

- Requires school districts to provide or contract for early intervention services to eligible children with disabilities from birth to 3 years of age.
- Establishes a Birth-to-Three Task Force.

HOUSE COMMITTEE ON CHILDREN & FAMILY SERVICES

Majority Report: The substitute bill be substituted therefor and the substitute bill do pass. Signed by 9 members: Representatives Kagi, Chair; Darneille, Vice Chair; Boldt, Ranking Minority Member; Roach, Assistant Ranking Minority Member; Bailey, Dickerson, Miloscia, Pettigrew and Shabro.

Staff: Cynthia Forland (786-7152).

Background:

Special education is instruction and related services that are specially designed to meet the unique needs and abilities of students with disabilities. It is provided at no cost to eligible students in the state between 3 and 21 years of age.

School districts may provide early intervention services to eligible preschool-age children with a disability. School districts that provide these services are entitled to the regular apportionments from state and county school funds, as provided by law, in addition to allocations from state excess cost funds made available for special services for children with disabilities.

If school districts opt to serve eligible preschool-age children, they must do so in the birth-to-3 age group under state regulations implementing Part C of the federal Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA).

The Department of Social and Health Services (DSHS) is the lead state agency responsible for early intervention services to children with a disability in the birth-to-3 age group.

Summary of Substitute Bill:

By September 1, 2008, each school district is required to provide or contract for early intervention services to all eligible children with disabilities from birth to 3 years of age. Eligibility must be determined according to Part C of the IDEA and as specified in state regulation.

School districts are required to provide or contract for early intervention services in partnership with local birth-to-3 lead agencies and birth-to-3 providers. The provided early intervention services must not supplant services or funding currently provided in the state for early intervention services to eligible children with disabilities from birth to 3 years of age.

The state-designated birth-to-3 lead agency must be payor of last resort for provided birth-to-3 early intervention services.

There is established a Birth-to-Three Task Force (Task Force) to make recommendations concerning policies, procedures, and regulations in order to ensure implementation of an equitable statewide comprehensive system for all eligible children with disabilities from birth to 3 years of age.

Members of the Task Force must be jointly appointed by the Governor and the Superintendent of Public Instruction by July 1, 2004, and must include, at a minimum, the following:

- representatives of the following: Special Education Operations within the Office of Superintendent of Public Instruction; the Washington Association of School Administrators; the Washington State School Directors' Association; an Educational Service District; the Special Education Advisory Council; the Infant Toddler Early Intervention Program within the DSHS; the Developmental Disabilities Section of the Association of County Human Services; the Medical Assistance Administration within the DSHS; the Governor's Head Start State

Collaboration Office; the Division of Child Care and Early Learning within the DSHS; the Children with Special Health Care Needs Program within the Department of Health; a local health department/district; an Indian tribe providing early intervention services; the Washington State Chapter of the American Academy of Pediatrics; the Early Childhood Development Association of Washington; the Neurodevelopmental Centers of Washington; a nonprofit local birth-to-3 lead agency, which is not already represented in the membership of the Task Force; and an advocacy group for children with disabilities from birth to 3 years of age and their families; and

- a Special Education Director from a school district providing early intervention services; a Special Education Director from a school district not providing early intervention services; and four members of the State Interagency Coordinating Council for Infants and Toddlers with Disabilities and Their Families, three of whom must be parents.

The Birth-to-Three Task Force is required to submit a report to the Governor and the Superintendent of Public Instruction by December 1, 2006, outlining their recommendations.

Substitute Bill Compared to Original Bill:

The membership of the Task Force must include a representative of a large school district.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Available.

Effective Date of Substitute Bill: The bill takes effect 90 days after adjournment of session in which bill is passed.

Testimony For: (Original bill) Only 50 percent of school districts in the state currently offer birth-to-3 early intervention services. Universal school district participation in the birth-to-3 program was determined to be a priority by the Work Group on Deaf Education in Washington convened by the House Children and Family Services Committee over the interim. This bill is not free, but will decrease costs over the long run. This bill goes to meet the intent behind the federal No Child Left Behind Act. Large school districts should be included on the Task Force. There are reservations relating to infrastructure involved in meeting the requirements of the bill. Of the school districts that currently offer early intervention services, some provide services in house and others contract out for those services. There is the possibility, with this bill, of preventing the need for special education for some children. The phase-in of the requirement, in particular, is supported by the Office of Superintendent of Public Instruction. Early intervention services provided by school districts are funded by state special education dollars. Early intervention services offered through the school districts provide needed therapy and support for children and their parents. The period from birth to 3 years of age is the most significant window of opportunity for intervening with children with disabilities. School district participation in early intervention would increase the amount of reimbursement funds available for early intervention providers. School district participation in early intervention services provides a seamless transition into school. The availability of early intervention services across the state must be ensured it is the right thing to do. School district participation is crucial in rural areas, where there are few early intervention services providers. In some areas, accessing services requires significant travel time or having to wait for services. The state needs a more equitable system of early intervention services.

Testimony Against: None.

Persons Testifying: Representative Dickerson, prime sponsor; Michelle Corker Curry, Seattle Public Schools; Greg Williamson, Office of Superintendent of Public Instruction; Ivy Jen; Sarah Drinkwater, Peninsula School District; Mindy Sperline; Mimi Siegel, Kindering Center; Ian Rooney; Mary Jean Mitchell and Seth Dawson, Little Red School House; Joan Zook, Shelton School District; Susan Day, Olympia Public Schools; Carol Greenough, King County and Association of County Human Services; and Cathy Murahashi, King County Parent Coalition.

Persons Signed In To Testify But Not Testifying: None.