13 for trial, by serving upon the opposite party a notice of trial at 8 permit the intelligent exercise of peremptory challenges. Any 9 necessary additions to the panel shall be selected at random from the 10 list of qualified jurors. The jury shall consist of six persons, 11 unless the parties in their written demand for jury demand that the 20 opinion upon what he or she may have heard or read, such opinion shall

22 must be satisfied, from all the circumstances, that the juror cannot 23 disregard such opinion and try the issue impartially.

25 as follows:

26 The jurors having been examined as to their qualifications, first

33 alternating process, if one of the parties declines to exercise a 34 peremptory challenge, then that party may no longer peremptorily
35 challenge any of the jurors in the group for which challenges are then 36 being considered and may only peremptorily challenge any jurors later

1 added to that group. A refusal to challenge by either party in the 2 said order of alternation(~~(7)~~) shall not (~~(defeat)~~) prevent the adverse 3 party (~~(of his)~~) from using the full number of challenges(~~(, but such~~ 4 ~~refusal on the part of the plaintiff to exercise his challenge in~~ 5 ~~proper turn, shall conclude him as to the jurors once accepted by him,~~

29 upon the trial of an ordinary issue of fact shall govern. The juror 30 challenged, or any other person otherwise competent may be examined as 31 a witness by either party. (~~(If a challenge be determined to be~~ 32 ~~sufficient, or found to be true, as the case may be, it shall be~~ 33 ~~allowed, and the juror to whom it was taken excluded; but if determined~~ 34 ~~or found otherwise, it shall be disallowed.)~~) If the challenge is
