Background: Washington's unemployment insurance system was modified in 2ESB 6097 in 2003. Among other modifications, the bill removed a requirement that these laws be liberally construed and made various changes in benefit calculations. For example, prior to the bill, a claimant's weekly benefit amount was calculated based on 4 percent of the average wages in the two quarters of the base year in which the claimant's wages were the highest. Beginning in January 2005, the weekly benefit amount was based on 1 percent of the claimant's annual wages.

Washington's system was further modified, for a limited time period, in EHB 2255 in 2005. Before July 1, 2007, the requirement that the unemployment insurance system be liberally construed when interpreting the system was restored. After the bill and before July 1, 2007, the claimant's weekly benefit amount was based on 3.85 percent of the average wages in the two quarters of the base year in which the claimant's wages were highest. The bill also provided for noncharging of certain benefits, made changes to the calculation of the social cost factor, and requisitioned from Reed Act funds certain amounts to be used when paying unemployment benefits. Finally, the Joint Legislative Task Force on Unemployment Insurance Benefit Equity was established to review the unemployment insurance system.

Summary of Bill: The Legislature recognizes that the Joint Legislative Task Force on Unemployment Insurance Benefit Equity (Task Force) has undertaken a comprehensive review of the unemployment insurance system, but has not yet reached agreement on its findings and recommendations. The deadline by which the Task Force must report to the Legislature is extended from January 1, 2006, to March 1, 2006.
