Background:

Dependency and Termination of Parental Rights Background

If there are allegations of abandonment, abuse or neglect, or no parent who is capable of caring for a child, the state may investigate the allegations and initiate a dependency proceeding in juvenile court. If the court finds the statutory requirements have been met, the court will find the child to be a dependent of the state.

Whenever the court orders a dependent child to be removed from the home, the court will enter a dispositional plan which will include the obligations of the parties including the parents, the supervising agency, or Department of Social and Health Services (Department), and the child. The dispositional order will contain an order for the placement of the child either within the home or outside of the home. If the child is placed outside the home, he or she may be placed with a relative or in non-relative foster care.

Within 60 days of assuming responsibility for the child, the Department is required to provide the court with a permanency plan for the child. The permanency plan will contain the desired goal for the child which may include a plan to return the child home, adoption, long-term placement, or guardianship, including a dependency guardianship. The court must hold the permanency planning hearing when a child has been in out-of-home care for nine months. The hearing must take place within 12 months of the current placement.

The status of all dependent children must be reviewed by the court every six months. During the review the court will examine the progress of the parents in meeting the requirements of the dispositional plan. At this hearing the court may return the child to the home if the parent has made sufficient progress.

If the parent fails to make progress in curing the parental deficiencies which led to the dependency, or if one of the statutory aggravating factors exist, a termination petition may be filed. Federal law requires that after a child has been in foster care for 15 of the past 22 months, the state must file a petition to terminate parental rights unless the child is being cared for by relatives, there is a compelling reason why termination would not be in the best interest of the child, or the state has failed to offer the necessary services to the parent.

If the court finds the statutory grounds for termination are met, the court will terminate the parental rights and the parent will no longer have rights, privileges, or obligations toward the child.

Task Force Background

In 2005, the Legislature formed a task force to review issues pertaining to the health, safety and welfare of children receiving services from Child Protective Services and Child Welfare Services. In 2006, the task force reported several recommendations to the Legislature for improving Child Protective Services and Child Welfare Services.

Summary of Substitute Bill:

The bill is to be known as "Sirita's Law."

Services

The Department is required to coordinate within its divisions, and enter into contracts with service providers, to ensure that parents in dependency cases receive priority for court-ordered services. If the services are unavailable to the parent, the Department must notify the court that the parent is unable to meet the requirements of the court order because the services are unavailable to the parent.

Transition Issues

Prior to placing a child in the home of a parent, the Department is required to identify all caregivers for the child and assess whether they are in need of services. If the Department recommends that the caregiver engage in services, and the caregiver fails to engage in the services, or follow through with the services, the Department must notify the court.

The Department is also required to conduct background checks on all adults residing in the home and notify the parents that they have an on-going duty to notify the Department of any person who is residing in the home or acting as a caregiver for the child.

Permanency Issues

If a child is removed from a parent due to abuse or neglect allegations, returned to the home of the parent, and subsequently removed due to allegations of abuse or neglect, the court must hold a permanency planning hearing to review the case. The court must decide what appropriate action to take including whether to change the permanency plan or require that a termination petition be filed. The court must use the best interest of the child as the primary consideration in deciding the appropriate action to take. The hearing must be held within 30 days of when the child was removed from the home.

Training

The Criminal Justice Training Commission is required to develop a multidisciplinary team training for law enforcement officers. Counties are encouraged to send teams to the trainings.

Counties are required to revise their child sexual abuse protocols to address child abuse, neglect, and fatality investigations.

Reporting

The Department must identify all dependency cases in which the permanency goals have not been reached within 15 months of when the child was placed in out-of-home care. The agencies must also identify the reason for non-compliance. The agencies are required to annually report this information to the Legislature.

Substitute Bill Compared to Original Bill:

A short title is added to the bill to name the bill "Sirita's Law."

The substitute bill adds the requirement that the Department ensure parents in dependency cases receive priority for court-ordered services.

The requirement is added that the caseworker must notify the court if the caregiver fails to follow through with recommended treatment, rather than only if the caregiver fails to engage in the services.

The training requirements are changed in the substitute to require the development of a multidisciplinary training of law enforcement on child abuse and neglect issues to which counties are encouraged to send teams for training, instead of requiring all law enforcement to receive annual training. The requirement is also added that counties must revise their child sexual abuse protocols to include abuse, neglect, and fatality investigations.

The substitute narrows the reporting requirement to only require the Department to identify those cases that have not been resolved in the federally required time limits and the reasons why they have not been resolved.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Available. New fiscal note requested on February 15, 2007.

Effective Date of Substitute Bill: The bill takes effect 90 days after adjournment of session in which bill is passed.

Staff Summary of Public Testimony:

(In support of original bill) This bill incorporates recommendations from the task force, as well as a number of recommendations from the Ombudsman's reviews of children's deaths. We try to protect parents' rights, we try to support families, but we also work to make families accountable. This bill has a good balance of services and accountability. The revolving door of children going home, being removed, and going home again is being addressed. We are trying to facilitate better communication between law enforcement and children's services at the local level. Better training of law enforcement is an area of critical need. Grant parents priority access to services. To have successful outcomes, parents must engage early, but the services must be ready when they do. Please add Sirita's Law back into HB 1333

(Neutral) Greater scrutiny over caregivers is important, regardless of whether they are parties to the dependency. This was a problem in Sirita's case. We support improvement instruction of law enforcement in handling abuse and neglect investigations.

(Opposed to original bill) We have concerns about the potentiality to create a duty to the Department that would have some legal and fiscal implications.

Persons Testifying: (In support of original bill) Representative Hinkle, prime sponsor; Gary Malkasian; Laurie Lippold, Children's Home Society of Washington; and Daniele Baxter, Foster Parents Association of Washington.

(Neutral) Mary Meinig, Office of the Family and Children Ombudsman.

(Opposed to original bill) Ross Dawson, Children's Administration.

Persons Signed In To Testify But Not Testifying: None.
