system to certify teachers who meet those standards. There are also NBPTS certificates for librarians and school counselors.

In 2007 the Legislature provided in statute that certificated instructional staff who have attained NBPTS certification will receive a bonus each year they maintain the certification. The bonus is $5,000 in 2007-08 and increases annually by inflation. Those NBPTS-certified staff in an instructional assignment in a school where at least 70 percent of the students qualify for federal free or reduced lunch (FRL) receive an additional $5,000 bonus.

According to figures from the Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction (OSPI), there are 148 individuals eligible to receive the additional bonus. Of the 287 schools in the state that meet the poverty threshold, a disproportionate number are elementary schools. There are 200 elementary schools, 35 middle schools, and 22 high schools with 70 percent FRL students.

Summary of Bill:

Beginning with the 2007-08 school year, the school poverty threshold of 70 percent FRL students for NBPTS-certified staff to receive an additional $5,000 bonus is reduced to at least 60 percent FRL students in middle schools and at least 50 percent FRL students in high schools.

The OSPI must adopt a standard definition of elementary, middle, and high schools when implementing these provisions.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Available.

Effective Date: The bill takes effect 90 days after adjournment of session in which bill is passed.

Staff Summary of Public Testimony:

(In support) Middle and high school teachers have a hard time qualifying for the additional bonus because older students tend not to sign up for free or reduced lunch, even if they are poor. There are many examples where all of the feeder elementary schools reach the threshold, but the middle or high school does not. These are the same children, and these schools face the same challenges. We need to recognize the challenges of poverty and provide the very best teachers in these schools.

(Concerns) None.

Persons Testifying: Representative Barlow, prime sponsor; Kelly Cannard, Vancouver School District; Lucinda Young, Washington Education Association; Michaela Miller, Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction; and Kim McClung, Kent-Meridian High School.

Persons Signed In To Testify But Not Testifying: None.
