Corporate Officer Coverage

Services performed by corporate officers are not considered covered employment for purposes of unemployment compensation unless the corporation elects coverage. Corporate officers are persons appointed as officers under the requirements of the Washington Business Corporation Act. They include those officers described in the corporation's bylaws or appointed by the board of directors under the bylaws.

Corporate Officer Liability

Corporate officers and other individuals are not personally liable for contributions owed by corporations or limited liability companies.

Reporting Penalties

Employers must file complete and accurate tax and wage reports every quarter, including the amount of remuneration paid and the number of hours worked for each worker. If employers fail to file timely and complete quarterly unemployment tax reports, they are subject to penalties of $250 or 10 percent of the contributions, whichever is less.

Reporting Errors

When employers fail to report the number of hours worked, that number is computed based on the amount of remuneration paid and the state minimum hourly wage rate. Claimants may be determined to be eligible for benefits based on computed hours. Claimants subsequently may be determined to be ineligible based on credible evidence of actual hours worked. Benefits paid to claimants who are subsequently determined to be ineligible are not charged to the experience rating accounts of employers who failed to report the number of hours worked. Instead, they are socialized among all contribution-paying employers.

Claimant Fraud Penalties

Individuals who knowingly make false statements involving material facts or who knowingly fail to report material facts are disqualified from benefits for that week and for an additional 26 weeks. This disqualification does not apply more than two years after the determination of disqualification.

Professional Employer Organizations and Third Party Payers

Personal services performed for third parties under contracts with temporary services agencies, employee leasing agencies, service referral agencies, or other entities are considered to be services for the agencies when the agencies are responsible for payment of wages for these services.

A temporary services agency is one that furnishes people who work part-time or on a temporary basis for a third party. An employee leasing agency is one that places employees of a client on the agency's payroll for a fee and leases the employees back to the client. A service referral agency is one that provides people to do specific tasks for a third party.

Summary of Bill:

Corporate Officer Coverage

Services performed by corporate officers are considered covered employment for purposes of unemployment compensation, unless one of the following exceptions applies.

Personal services performed by bona fide corporate officers for certain corporations are not considered services in employment, unless the corporation elects to provide coverage. These corporations are ones for which all personal services are performed only by bona fide corporate officers.

Services performed by corporate officers are not considered services in employment if the corporation exempts the officers from coverage. Public companies may exempt bona fide officers who are voluntarily elected or appointed, are shareholders, and exercise substantial control in the company's daily management, and whose primary duties do not include manual labor. Private corporations may exempt eight or fewer bona fide officers who agree to be exempt from coverage, are voluntarily elected or appointed, and exercise substantial control of the corporation's daily management, and any number of corporate officers who are related by blood within the third degree or marriage. Corporations may reinstate coverage at specified intervals.

Corporate officers who own ten percent or more of the outstanding stock or who are family members of such officers are not unemployed during their term of office or ownership, even if wages are not being paid. Corporate officers are unemployed if the corporation dissolves or if they permanently resign or are permanently removed from office.

When employers register with the Employment Security Department (Department), the registrations must include names and social security numbers of owners, partners, members, and corporate officers, as well as mailing addresses and telephone numbers. They must also include the percentage of stock owned by each corporate officer, delineated as zero percent, less than ten percent, or ten percent or more. Employers must report any changes in owners, partners, members, and corporate officers within 30 days, and must report changes in stock ownership at intervals prescribed by the Commissioner of the Department.

Corporate Officer Liability

When corporate or limited liability companies go out of business, corporate officers, members, and owners who had control or supervision of the payment of contributions are personally liable for the payment of unpaid contributions, and any interest and penalties on unpaid contributions, if they: (1) willfully sought to evade taxes; (2) willfully destroyed records; or (3) willfully failed to truthfully account for the financial condition of the business. In addition, they are liable only if the contributions became due while they were responsible for their payment, and there is no reasonable means of collecting the contributions owed directly from the corporation or limited liability company. "Willfully" means "an intentional, conscious, and voluntary course of action."

Reporting Penalties

Penalties for filing untimely or incomplete quarterly unemployment tax and wage reports are modified as follows:

- Employers who fail to file timely reports are subject to a penalty of $25 per violation.
- Employers who file incomplete or incorrectly formatted reports receive a warning letter for the first occurrence. The warning letter must either provide instructions for accurate reporting or notify the employer how to obtain technical assistance from the Employment Security Department.

If no contributions are due, employers are subject to the following penalties for repeat occurrences within five years of the last occurrence:

Second occurrence Penalty of $75

Third occurrence Penalty of $150

Fourth occurrence and Penalty of $250
occurrences thereafter

If contributions are due, employers are subject to the following penalties:

Second occurrence Penalty equal to 10 percent of contributions
Not less than $75 or more than $250

Third occurrence Penalty equal to 10 percent of contributions
Not less than $150 or more than $250

Fourth occurrence and Penalty of $250
occurrences thereafter

The Commissioner of the Department may waive penalties for good cause if the failure to file timely, complete, and correctly formatted reports or pay timely contributions was not the employer's fault.

Reporting Errors

Benefits paid using computed hours are not considered an overpayment and are not subject to collection. For contribution-paying employers, benefits are charged to their experience rating accounts. For reimbursable employers, benefits must be reimbursed.

Claimant Fraud Penalties

Individuals who knowingly make false statements involving material facts or who knowingly fail to report material facts are disqualified from benefits for that week. They are also disqualified for additional weeks and subject to penalties as follows:

First time Disqualification for 26 additional weeks

Second time Disqualification for 52 additional weeks
Additional penalty equal to 25 percent of overpayment

Third and Disqualification for 104 additional weeks subsequent times Additional penalty equal to 50 percent of overpayment

Professional Employer Organizations and Third Party Payers

Various terms, including the following, are defined:

- "Professional employer organizations" are persons that enter into agreements with one or more client employers to provide services such as human resource functions, risk management, or payroll administration, in a coemployment relationship.
- "Third-party payers" are entities that enter into agreements with one or more employers to provide administrative, human resource, or payroll administration services, but not in an employment relationship. "Third-party payers" do not include professional employer organizations, temporary staffing services companies, services referral agencies, and labor organizations.
- "Temporary staffing services companies" are entities that: (1) recruit and hire their own employees; (2) find other organizations that need the services of those employees; and (3) assign the employees on a temporary basis to perform work or services for a client. "Temporary staffing services companies" do not include professional employer organizations, permanent employee leasing, or permanent employee placement services.
- "Client employers" are employers who enter into professional employer agreements with professional employer organizations.
- "Coemployers" are professional employer organizations and client employers that have entered into professional employer agreements.

Client employers are assigned individual contribution rates based on their own experience. They are liable for the payment of any taxes, interest, or penalties. Professional employer organizations (PEOs) may collect and pay taxes due from client employers. If such payments have been made to PEOs by client employers, the Department must first attempt to collect contributions due from PEOs.

The PEOs are required to register with the Department and to ensure that their client employers are also registered with the Department. PEOs must provide the Department with: (1) the names, addresses, Unified Business Identifier numbers, and Employment Security Department account numbers of client employers; (2) the names and social security numbers of corporate officers and owners of client employers; and (3) the business location in Washington where payroll records of client employers will be available for review or inspection.

The PEOs must: (1) notify the Department within 30 days each time they add or terminate a relationship with a client employer; (2) provide evidence authorizing them to act on behalf of client employers for unemployment insurance purposes; and (3) maintain accurate payroll records for client employers and make these records available for review or inspection. The PEOs may file single electronic reports containing separate and distinct information for client employers, or separate paper reports for client employers.

Personal services performed for an employer who utilizes a third-party payer constitute employment for the employer. The third-party payer is not considered the employer.

The Department must collect contributions, penalties, and interest due from PEOs. If amounts due are not paid by the PEOs within 10 days, the Commissioner may collect these amounts from client employers.

The Department must report on the implementation of sections relating to PEOs to the Unemployment Insurance Advisory Committee and appropriate legislative committees by December 1, 2010. The report must examine impacts on PEOs, small businesses, and the unemployment insurance system.
