EFFECT: Makes it a requirement rather than a preference for contractors performing energy efficiency services through the Washington State University Extension Energy pilot program to:
- participate in quality control and efficiency training;
- use workers trained from workforce training and apprenticeship programs if these workers are available;
- pay prevailing wage;
- hire from the community in which the program is located; and
- create employment opportunities for veterans, members of the National Guard, and low-income and disadvantaged populations.

Makes it a requirement rather than a preference for sponsors under the Low-Income Weatherization Program to:
- use workers trained from workforce training and apprenticeship programs if these workers are available; and
- create employment opportunities for veterans, members of the National Guard, and low-income and disadvantaged populations.

Requires sponsors under the Low-Income Weatherization Program to:
- pay prevailing wage; and
- hire from the community in which the program is located.

Clarifies references to paying prevailing wage.
