Background:

Health Professional Loan Repayment and Scholarship Program.

The Legislature created the Health Professional Loan Repayment and Scholarship Program (Health Professionals) to attract and retain health professionals to serve in workforce shortage areas in Washington state. Students who receive a scholarship or educational loan repayment assistance must commit to serve in shortage areas for at least three but no more than five years.

The Department of Health (Department), in consultation with the Higher Education Coordinating Board (Board) and the Department of Social and Health Services, is required to determine eligible health care professions, shortage areas, and annual award amounts for each health profession. Awards are limited to a maximum of five years per individual. The Department also determines the length of service commitment. For prospective physicians seeking a scholarship, priority is given to those who live in rural areas.

This analysis was prepared by non-partisan legislative staff for the use of legislative members in their deliberations. This analysis is not a part of the legislation nor does it constitute a statement of legislative intent.

Health Professionals: Repayment Obligations.

Recipients who do not complete their full service commitment must repay twice the amount paid by the program in addition to any payments on the principal and interest that are still owing. The interest rate on the conditional scholarship is 8 percent for the first four years and 10 percent beginning in the fifth year. Interest rate is not addressed for the loan program. The period for repayment starts no later than nine months after completion or discontinuation of study or required residency. Participants may be released from their obligations to repay their scholarship or loan if the Board deems there are circumstances beyond the individual's control.

In the Health Professions program there is an 8 percent default rate on service contracts and promissory notes by the loan and scholarship recipients. The average amount owed is just under $22,000 for loan repayment recipients who did not meet their service commitments, and just over $28,000 for the conditional scholarship recipients who failed to complete the required education or meet service commitments.

Future Teachers Program.

In 2004, the Legislature modified an existing, but inactive, conditional scholarship program to target teacher shortage areas. The Future Teachers Conditional Scholarship and Loan Repayment Program (Future Teachers) is designed to encourage outstanding students and paraprofessionals to become teachers and to encourage current teachers to obtain additional endorsements in teacher shortage subjects. This program is administered by the Higher Education Coordinating Board (Board).

Recipients agree to teach in an approved educational program in Washington K-12 public schools in return for conditional scholarships or loan repayments. Selection criteria emphasize excellence and include academic ability, community contribution, bilingual ability and willingness to commit to teaching in shortage areas. Priority is given to individuals seeking an additional certification or an additional endorsement in math, science, technology education, agricultural education, business and marketing education, family and consumer science education or special education. Participants are eligible to receive future teachers scholarships or loan repayments for a maximum of five years.

Future Teachers: Repayment Obligations.

If a conditional scholarship recipient does not meet their service commitment, they are obliged to repay the scholarship amount plus interest and an equalization fee. The repayment amount is prorated depending on the amount of service already provided. The Board sets the the minimum payment amount and determines the interest annually. The maximum period for repayment is ten years. The Board sets terms of payment, including interest rates, fees, and deferment, in rule.

Summary of Bill:

Terms for repayment are adjusted for students who do not meet their service obligations for the Health Professionals or Future Teachers programs. Repayment terms for the Health Professionals program are more closely aligned with those for the Future Teachers program.

For Health Professionals, the Higher Education Coordinating Board (Board) has authority to establish interest rate on repayments. The ability to assess interest is added to the loan repayment portion of Health Professions. Language is added to clarify that the penalty is based on the remaining principal.

For Future Teachers, the Board retains the authority to establish the interest rate and is no longer required to establish the rate annually. Quarterly interest accrual is removed for both Health Professionals and Future Teachers.

Repayment for Health Professionals starts no later than six months after completion or discontinuation of study or postgraduate training rather than nine months as in current statute. A maximum repayment period for Health Professionals is set at ten years.

The Board is required to establish an appeals process in rule for both the Health Professionals and Future Teachers programs.

A technical correction removes a section regarding eligibility for the Health Professionals program that was only applicable until June 1, 1992. "Residency training" is replaced with "postgraduate training" to apply to eligible health professions, not just physicians.
