Background:

Any alien offender who has been sentenced under the Sentencing Reform Act of 1981 and who has been found by the United States Attorney General to be subject to a final order of deportation or exclusion may be placed on conditional release status. If placed on conditional release status, the offender is transferred to the custody of the Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) division of the U.S. Department of Homeland Security.

An offender may not be released on a conditional release status unless the Secretary of the Department of Corrections (Secretary) finds that such a release is in the best interest of the state. Conditional release status may only be allowed with the approval of the sentencing court and the prosecuting attorney of the county of conviction.

If an offender is serving a sentence for a violent offense, sex offense, or for an offense that is a crime against a person, he or she may not be placed on conditional release status. Once an offender is turned over to the ICE, the Department of Corrections (DOC) must issue a warrant for the offender's arrest within the United States which will remain in effect until the expiration of the conditional release. The unserved portion of an offender's term of confinement is tolled when the offender is released to the ICE. If the offender is arrested, the DOC must seek extradition as necessary and the offender must be returned to the DOC for the completion of the unserved portion of his or her term of total confinement.

Summary of Engrossed Substitute Bill:

The placement of an offender on conditional release status no longer requires the Secretary to find that such placement is in the best interest of the state. The approval of the sentencing court and the prosecuting attorney is no longer needed.

If an offender is serving a sentence for a violent offense, sex offense, or for an offense that is a crime against a person, he or she may not be placed on conditional release status. Before an offender is placed on conditional release status, the Secretary is required to enter into an agreement with the ICE that once an alien offender has been turned over to the ICE and placed on conditional release status, that offender will remain in total confinement at a facility operated by the ICE pending the offender's return to his or her country of origin. If an offender is arrested after being placed on conditional release status, the DOC may, but is not required to, seek extradition to have the offender returned to the DOC.

The provisions would apply to persons convicted before, on, or after the effective date of the bill.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Available.

Effective Date: The bill contains an emergency clause and takes effect on March 15, 2011.

Staff Summary of Public Testimony:

(In support) Under current law, the sentencing court and the prosecutor must approve the placement of an offender on conditional release status. In the last two years, the DOC sent out letters on 80 cases to the courts and prosecutors and in only one case did both the court and the prosecutor consent to conditional release. The DOC supports the bill. During this economic crisis the state taxpayers should not pay to incarcerate offenders who will be deported at the end of their sentence anyway.

(With concerns) The scope of the bill would extend beyond undocumented residents to all legal non-citizens who might be subject to deportation due to a felony conviction. The bill does not include any protections for individuals who may be able to contest deportation even after a final order of deportation has been entered. There is an amendment that could be adopted that would mitigate the due process concerns raised by the bill. The amendment would require the DOC to provide notice to individuals who may be considered for early release so those individuals have the opportunity to access legal representation. For those being sentenced after enactment, the court would be required to alert the individuals of their rights at sentencing before being transferred to DOC custody.

(Opposed) None.
