Brief Summary of Bill

- Requires an applicant offered a conditional offer of employment as a peace officer or reserve officer to submit to a background investigation, including a check of criminal history.
- Requires the Criminal Justice Training Commission to deny certification to a peace officer who has a break in law enforcement service of two years if the officer fails to comply with the background investigation requirement.

Hearing Date: 2/11/11

Staff: Morgan Powell (786-7119) and Alexa Silver (786-7190).

Background:

The Criminal Justice Training Commission (CJTC) provides basic corrections training, law enforcement training, and educational programs for criminal justice personnel, including commissioned officers, corrections officers, fire marshals, and prosecuting attorneys.

An applicant offered a conditional offer of employment as a peace officer or reserve officer must pass a psychological exam and a polygraph test as a condition of continuing employment. The tests must be administered by the hiring county, city, or state law enforcement agency. The psychological exam must be administered by a Washington licensed psychiatrist or psychologist, and the polygraph test must be administered by an experienced polygrapher.

This analysis was prepared by non-partisan legislative staff for the use of legislative members in their deliberations. This analysis is not a part of the legislation nor does it constitute a statement of legislative intent.

The CJTC is authorized to receive criminal history record information that includes non-conviction data for employment by the CJTC or for certification of peace officers.

Under certain circumstances, the CJTC may deny or revoke certification of a peace officer. The CJTC must deny certification to an officer who has lost certification as a result of a break in law enforcement work of more than two years, if the officer has failed to pass the psychological exam and polygraph test.

Summary of Bill:

An applicant offered a conditional offer of employment as a peace officer or reserve officer must submit to a background investigation, including a check of criminal history as a condition of continuing employment. The results of the background investigation will be used to determine the applicant's suitability. The background investigation is administered by the agency that makes the conditional offer of employment.

The polygraph test must be administered by an experienced polygraph examiner who is in compliance with standards established by the CJTC.

The CJTC must deny certification to an officer who has lost certification as a result of a break in law enforcement work of more than two years if the officer has failed to comply with requirements regarding the background investigation, psychological exam, and polygraph test.
