Background:

Public funds may only be deposited in financial institutions that have been designated as public depositories by the Public Deposit Protection Commission (Commission), which is comprised of the Governor, the Lieutenant Governor, and the State Treasurer. The Commission is responsible for protecting all public funds deposited in public depositories.

"Public funds" are those moneys belonging to or held for the state, its political subdivisions, municipal corporations, agencies, courts, boards, commissions, or committees, including moneys held in trust. A "public depository" is a financial institution which does not claim exemption from the payment of any sales or compensating use or ad valorem taxes under the laws of this state, which has been approved by the Commission to hold public deposits, and which has segregated for the benefit of the Commission eligible collateral having a value of not less than its maximum liability.

To be approved as a public depository, a financial institution must meet minimum requirements of the Commission and pledge securities as collateral to protect public funds on deposit in all public depositories (not just for that particular institution). If deposit insurance and collateral pledged by a failed institution are insufficient to reimburse all public depositors, the other public depositaries are each assessed a proportionate share of the shortfall.

Public depositaries submit a written report to the Commission that indicates the total amount of public funds deposited, the uninsured amount of public funds deposited, the depositary's net worth, and the amount and nature of segregated collateral.

The Commission has broad authority to make and enforce regulations, require information from and set requirements for public depositaries, require additional or different types of collateral, allocate sums due to public depositors in case of loss, and to enforce sanctions for noncompliance.

Credit unions doing business in Washington can be chartered by the state or federal government. The Department of Financial Institutions regulates state-chartered credit unions. The National Credit Union Share Insurance Fund (NCUSIF) insures deposits in credit unions up to $250,000.

Legislation enacted in 2010 allows state-chartered credit unions to accept public deposits. Credit unions may accept the lesser of the NCUSIF limit or $100,000. The maximum deposit applies to all funds attributable to any one depositor of public funds in any one credit union. Credit unions are subject to Commission reporting requirements, but are not part of the public depositary pool.

Summary of Bill:

Credit unions may accept deposits up to the amount insured by the NCUSIF. In addition to state-chartered credit unions, federally chartered credit unions may also accept public deposits. Credit unions that accept public deposits are subject to the Commission's authority in addition to Commission reporting requirements.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Not requested.

Effective Date: The bill takes effect 90 days after adjournment of the session in which the bill is passed.
