Background: The Washington Habitual Traffic Offenders Act sets forth a statutory scheme for identifying those persons committing traffic offenses who meet the definition of habitual offender. State law identifies certain serious traffic offenses that trigger the habitual offender categorization, due either to the seriousness of the offense or the number and/or frequency of specified offenses.

A person meeting the definition of habitual offender is subject to driver license revocation. The Department of Licensing (DOL) is required to notify a habitual offender of such license revocation by certified mail. Certified mail allows the sender to see when the mail was delivered and requires the signature of the recipient. This service currently costs $3.29.

Summary of Bill: DOL is authorized to utilize first class mail, rather than certified mail, to notify a habitual traffic offender of the license revocation.

Appropriation: None.
