SENATE COMMITTEE ON WAYS & MEANS

Staff: Dean Carlson (786-7305)

Background: Under current law, property, including buildings and improvements, owned by a nonprofit organization or association engaged in youth character building activities are exempt from the property tax. In addition churches are exempt from property tax.

Property leased to a nonprofit organization engaged in youth character building activities – and some other activities – are not exempt from property tax, unless that property is owned by an organization that is otherwise exempt from the property tax.

Currently, there is a situation where a church is leasing property to a for profit youth character building organization, who, in turn, is subleasing the property to a nonprofit youth character building organization. Since the for profit organization is in the middle of this transaction, the property is subject to property tax.

Summary of Bill: Property remains eligible for a property tax exemption for youth character building activities, if the property is owned by an property tax exempt church or other nonprofit organization which is exempt from property taxation that leases the property to another organization for the same exempt purposes, provided that:

- the property is owned by an entity formed exclusively for the purpose of leasing the property to an organization, which will use the property for the exempt purposes;

- the property is leased to an organization, which uses the property for the exempt purposes; and
- the immediate previous owner of the property had received an exemption for the property.

These provisions are in effect for nonprofit youth character building organizations, nonprofit nonsectarian organizations which provide character building, protective or rehabilitative social services for all ages, veterans relief organizations, church camp facilities, and nonprofit organization that issue debt for student loans or that are guarantee agencies.
