EFFECT: Requires legislative and judicial agencies to submit "information" rather than "sufficient information" on proposed information technology expenditures. Clarifies that the assessment and report of state telecommunications and information services network by the Consolidated Technology Services Agency pertains to executive branch agencies. Changes report due dates from September to December. Requires that institutions of higher education, the judiciary's, and the legislature's information technology security plans be "comparable to" rather than "consistent with" the security standards and policies of the Office of the Chief Information Officer.
