Background:

A port district is governed by a three-member board of commissioners elected to staggered six or four-year terms of office, with one commissioner being elected in each odd-year general election. Voters of a port district with a population of 500,000 or more may authorize the size of the board of commissioners to be increased to five members. The ports of Seattle and Tacoma are the only ports with a population of 500,000 or more, and both have a five-member board of commissioners.

The terms of office for port commissioners of each countywide port district with a population of 100,000 or more is four years, and either six or four years in all other port districts. The six year term of office may be changed to a four year term upon either a resolution of the port commissioners or petition by the voters of the port district. The signatures required for a petition must be at least ten percent of the number of voters in the port district voting at the last general election. The ballot proposition must be submitted to the voters for approval at the next general
