Vacation of Records.

A person convicted of Prostitution who committed the offense as the result of being a victim of Trafficking or Promoting Prostitution in the first degree may apply to the sentencing court for vacation of the record of conviction, except that the record cannot be cleared if: (1) there are any criminal charges against the applicant pending in any court of this state or another state, or in any federal court; (2) the applicant has been convicted of a new crime in this state, another state, or federal court since the date of conviction; or (3) the applicant has ever had the record of another prostitution conviction vacated.

If the offender meets these tests, the court may clear the record of conviction by permitting the applicant to withdraw the applicant's plea of guilty and to enter a plea of not guilty; or, if the applicant has been convicted after a plea of not guilty, the court setting aside the verdict of guilty; and dismissing the information, indictment, complaint, or citation against the applicant and vacating the judgment and sentence.

Staff Summary of Public Testimony:

(In support) As to vacation of convictions, the women have to prove that they were victims of the highest order of trafficking. The Seattle Police Department has no doubt that these girls are victims and no qualms about allowing them to clear their records. This is talked about being a victimless crime, but that is untrue, this is very much a victim crime. It is modern slavery in the United States. Statistics show that 95 percent of prostitution is pimp-controlled and being compelled to commit crimes, not limited to prostitution, for their pimps is always part of that.

(Opposed) None.

Persons Testifying: Representative Orwall, prime sponsor; James Graddon, City of SeaTac Police Department; and Julie Snider, Genesis Project Seattle.
