Background:

The State Board of Education (SBE) establishes minimum requirements for high school graduation through administrative rules. The current requirements are 20 credits among a specified distribution of subjects, a culminating project, and a High School and Beyond Plan.

School district boards of directors may establish additional local high school graduation requirements. For example, according to a database developed by the SBE in 2011, at least 20 school districts require students to complete community service for graduation. The required number of hours ranges from 10 to 100.

Summary of Engrossed Substitute Bill:

By September 1, 2013, school districts must adopt a policy that is supportive of community service and provides an incentive, such as recognition or credit, for students who participate in community service.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Available.

Effective Date: The bill takes effect 90 days after adjournment of the session in which the bill is passed.

Staff Summary of Public Testimony:

(In support) Students should have the opportunity to think about what they are learning in high school as more than just a class. Many school districts in the state already require community service. Simply belonging to a club is not enough. Students should have the ability to say that they have done something for their high school or their community. Many will question the value of adding another graduation requirement. However, making community service a requirement will benefit most, if not all, students. They will be able to use this as a basis for college applications and put it on their resume.

(With concerns) Community service is ineffective. However, service learning is valuable. Service learning involves adding structure and learning components to accompany community service. Service learning can be incorporated into all grade levels, including middle school. Adding another graduation requirement takes away from local control.

(Opposed) This bill is opposed because it defeats the purpose of service. Community service should be something done out of the goodness of one's heart, not something forced on a student for graduation. The question becomes one of motivation and whether someone is doing this for the right reasons. There is much greater gratification from wanting to do something and being an ambassador for one's community. There are many opportunities for students to become involved in high school and community activities and organizations. Student organizations do community service. Personal motivation should be the reason for helping people. Students should be rewarded for their community service, not required to do it.
