Background: State Business and Occupation (B&O) Tax. Washington's major business tax is the B&O tax. The B&O tax is imposed on the gross receipts of business activities conducted within the state, without any deduction for the costs of doing business. Revenues are deposited in the state general fund. The main rates are 0.471 percent for retailing; 0.484 percent for manufacturing, wholesaling, and extracting; and 1.8 percent for professional and personal services, and activities not classified elsewhere until June 30, 2013, at which time the 0.3 percent rate surcharge expires and the B&O rate for service and other category is 1.5 percent thereafter. In addition to these general B&O tax rates and classifications, there are reduced rates and separate classifications for these preferential rates. In total, there are over 50 different state B&O tax classifications.

This analysis was prepared by non-partisan legislative staff for the use of legislative members in their deliberations. This analysis is not a part of the legislation nor does it constitute a statement of legislative intent.

Local B&O Taxes. Thirty-nine cities impose their own B&O taxes, with variations in rates, exemptions, deductions, and thresholds. In 2003, the Legislature directed the cities to form a committee and work with the Association of Washington Cities (AWC) to adopt a model ordinance on municipal B&O taxes. That model ordinance may be amended through a process allowing for business and public input. Amendments to definitions and tax classifications in the model ordinance are allowed no more than once every four years, however amendments to comply with state law are allowed at any time. Cities imposing a B&O tax must provide for:

- a system of credits that prevent multiple taxation of the same income;
- a gross receipts threshold for small businesses;
- tax reporting frequency requirements;
- provisions for penalties and interest;
- claim and refund provisions; and
- certain terms with definitions from the state B&O statutes or based on comparable definitions within the state B&O statutes.

Other than mandatory deductions for professional employer organizations and mandatory credits addressing multiple taxation, cities may adopt their own provisions for tax exemptions, credits, deductions, and other preferences, as well as tax classifications and tax rates. Cities that deviate from non-mandatory provisions of the model ordinance must make a description of the deviations available to the public.

Summary of Bill (Recommended Substitute): Part I. Beginning July 1, 2013, only the Department of Revenue (DOR) may amend the model ordinance. The four-year limitation on amendments is removed. Cities must have B&O tax ordinances that provide for assignment, agent, and courtesy dealer sales consistent with state law, as well as, tax classifications and definitions consistent with state law, with limited exception. B&O tax classifications must be uniform among all cities and with state B&O tax classifications. Descriptions of cities' deviations from non-mandatory provisions of the model ordinance must be made available to DOR for publication. Any DOR guidance, rule, or statement on B&O taxes takes precedence over a city's conflicting interpretation. Professional employer services are taxable by cities under the service and other business activities classification. The burden of proving that a sale is a wholesale rather than a retail sale may be met by complying with state law and DOR must provide assistance in electronic verification if a city so requests.

Part II. Some state B&O tax classifications are consolidated to reduce complexity for taxpayers, decrease disputes between taxpayers and DOR, and move toward uniformity between state and local B&O tax systems. The following changes are made to the state B&O tax code:

- consolidates the extracting and extracting for hire classifications;
- consolidates the public road construction and government contracting classifications into the wholesaling classifications; and
- consolidates a variety of classifications into the service and other business activities classification, including provisions relating to real estate brokers, research and development, travel agents, boarding homes, international freight forwarders, day care services, and the receipt of royalties.

Technical corrections are made.

EFFECT OF CHANGES MADE BY TRADE & ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT COMMITTEE (Recommended Substitute): Deductions are provided to avoid unintended tax increases on several classes of taxpayers.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Available.

Committee/Commission/Task Force Created: No.

Effective Date: The bill contains two effective dates. Please refer to section 301 of the bill.

Staff Summary of Public Testimony on Original Bill: PRO: Businesses are frustrated with trying to comply with the revenue collection process. There should be a single platform. This should be revenue neutral. The cities are allowed their uniqueness. This is not like last year's bill. The tax simplification report indicates businesses want one place to go. Being able to pay taxes in one spot is desirable. The state should be streamlining. The current system causes difficulty for business accountants. This bill is an outstanding attempt; nothing here prohibits flexibility for cities.

CON: Cities are trying to achieve streamlining goals at the local level. Cities only have between three and eight B&O classifications while the state has five. This would give DOR unfettered power to change local tax codes. The cities will lose millions on this. The cities have a better plan that would cover 90 percent of local B&O taxes collected. This will add expenses to the state. The cities should be allowed to proceed with their efforts at uniformity. This bill will not create a simpler system for the 400 businesses in Westport. The state exempts seafood processing, but if seafood processing tax is not allowed in Westport, 45 percent of its revenue will be lost. Local businesses will lose the ability to work with local officials when issues come up.

OTHER: Businesses want to make tax definitions consistent and less complex. They want to reduce the number of classifications. The state B&O tax classifications are a morass. This bill would help small businesses
