the event of war, public disaster, or when otherwise required for the health, safety, or welfare of the public. The Governor appoints the Adjutant General to command the state militia.

The federal Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act (USERRA) of 1994 provides certain employment protection for military reserve and National Guard members who are called from civil employment into federal active duty. The Employer Support for Guard and Reserve Ombudsman's (ESGR Ombudsman's) office, located with the Department of Defense, provides services to members and civilian employers about the rights and protections under the USERRA.

In 2001 the Legislature provided similar protections for reserve and National Guard members called into state active duty. State law prohibits an employer from discriminating against an employee because of active duty military service, including state active duty. The law also grants a right to reemployment for persons who left an employment position due to active duty service.

The Attorney General must bring a legal action against any employer who violates the provision of this law, if the service member protected was in state active duty and not covered by the USERRA. Also, the Attorney General's obligation only arises if the ESGR Ombudsman has been unable to resolve the matter.

Summary of Bill:

The Attorney General's obligations to enforce a service members employment rights arises only after the Adjutant General has been unable to resolve the matter with the employer. The role of the ESGR Ombudsman is eliminated.
