Background:

There are 39 hospitals in Washington that are certified as critical access hospitals. These are hospitals with 25 beds or less that are generally located in rural areas. They must deliver continuous emergency department services and they may not have an average length of stay of more than 96 hours per patient. The Critical Access Hospital program allows hospitals under Washington's medical assistance programs to receive payment for hospital services based on allowable costs and to have more flexibility in staffing.

The Department of Health and the Health Care Authority, in collaboration with the Washington State Hospital Association, have formed the Washington Rural Health Access Preservation (WRHAP) project to examine different structures for payment and care delivery for critical access hospitals. The WRHAP project expects to create a new facility type that would allow rural critical access hospitals to scale their services to the needs and care patterns of the communities. An interim progress report on the WRHAP project is due to the Legislature by December 1, 2018.

Summary of Bill:

It is clarified that the cost-based method for reimbursing critical access hospitals under medical assistance programs does not apply to critical access hospitals participating in the Washington Rural Health Access Preservation (WRHAP) pilot.

Payments for services delivered by public health care service districts participating in the WRHAP pilot must be sufficient to sustain essential services to the community, including emergency and primary care services. The reimbursement methodology must adjust payment amounts based upon quality and value, rather than volume, and the Health Care Authority must encourage other health care payers to adopt the methodology.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Available.

Effective Date: The bill takes effect 90 days after adjournment of the session in which the bill is passed.

Staff Summary of Public Testimony:

(In support) The state wants hospitals to innovate and move from fee-for-service reimbursement to a value-based system. This bill provides assurance to hospitals that the funding in the Washington Rural Hospital Access Preservation (WRHAP) pilot projects will allow them to maintain the reimbursement rates that they had before. The 14 remote, low-volume critical access hospitals participating in the WRHAP program provide a full range of health care services from primary care to acute care, and sometimes long-term care. The operating margin for these hospitals in 2015 was negative 10 percent and financial problems at these hospitals jeopardize the hospitals as well as their communities. This bill allows for the Health Care Authority to reimburse the hospitals differently and allows them to sustain their services and provide support for a comprehensive population health management system.

Critical access hospital status has provided some financial stability, however, small remote hospitals still face challenges due to low volume, shifting from inpatient to outpatient services, and a lack of commercial payers. Hospitals cannot afford to not be critical access, but they also cannot provide all of the required services. It is hoped that the WRHAP project will provide flexible funding based on services that fit the community as well as predictable and stable funding.

(Opposed) None.
