Background:

Prevailing Wage Determinations.

State law requires that contractors pay prevailing wages to laborers, workers, and mechanics employed on all public works contracts and public building service maintenance contracts. The prevailing wage is the hourly wage, usual benefits, and overtime paid in the largest city in each county to the majority of individuals in the same trade or occupation. The prevailing wage for each county and occupation is established by the industrial statistician for the Department of Labor and Industries (Department).

The industrial statistician is authorized to issue determinations regarding the prevailing wage in response to requests by interested parties. These determinations may be sought to clarify how prevailing wage law applies to a specific project. For example, determinations may examine whether the prevailing wage is owed for work on a project or the appropriate scope of work governing the wage of a given group of workers.

Recovering Prevailing Wages Owed.

If an employer fails to pay a worker wages owed, the worker may file a wage complaint with the Department. The Department must investigate and if a violation is found, may order the employer to pay backpay and interest. The Department applies a three year statute of limitations and looks back three years for wages owed. As an alternative to collecting wages through the Department's complaint process, workers may file a private right of action for unpaid prevailing wages.

The time period to recover wages affected by a prevailing wage determination is tolled until the determination is final.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Requested on January 27, 2017.

Effective Date: The bill takes effect 90 days after adjournment of the session in which the bill is passed.
