Background:

Separate sets of laws govern driver training schools and traffic safety education courses offered by some secondary schools in the state, but changes taking effect in 2018 will align certain aspects of both programs (see below for details). The completion of driver training at either type of program is one of the mandatory criteria for those under the age of 18 to be eligible to receive an intermediate driver's license.

Traffic Safety Education.

Legislation enacted in 2017 (Engrossed Substitute House Bill 1481, enacted as Chapter 197, Laws of 2017) obligates the Department of Licensing (DOL) and the Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction (OSPI) to jointly develop and maintain a required driver training education curriculum. approved private schools (approved private school) operating a driver training education program, as well as private driver training schools, are required to use this curriculum. The jointly developed curriculum must be prepared by August 1, 2018.

The 2017 legislation also:

- requires the DOL to develop and administer a certification process for a school district's traffic safety education program or the traffic safety education program or the traffic safety education program of an approved private school;
- requires the OSPI and the DOL to consult with Central Washington University traffic safety instructors or program content developers in developing the curriculum;
- requires each school district and approved private school to maintain driver training education course records for three years following completion of instruction; and
- authorizes the DOL to conduct audits of driver training education programs at least once every five years to ensure that instructors are qualified teachers of driver training education and are teaching the required curriculum material, and that accurate records are maintained and accurate information is provided to the DOL regarding student performance.

In addition, the 2017 legislation authorized the DOL to suspend a school or school district's traffic safety education program certification if:

- the school or school district does not follow the curriculum set by the OSPI;
- any program instructors are not qualified teachers of driver training education;
- accurate records have not been maintained; or
- accurate information regarding student performance.

Summary of Bill:

The curriculum to be jointly developed by the DOL and the OSPI is designated the "core" curriculum for driver training education courses. Private driver training schools may use a supplemental curriculum, but any supplemental curriculum used by a private driver training school must be displayed with the required core curriculum at the school's established place of business.

A technical correction is made to the definition of "traffic safety education program," which is modified to be consistent with current law adding "approved private schools" to the list of specified entities that may offer driver training education courses.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Requested on January 5, 2018.

Effective Date: The bill takes effect on August 1, 2018.
