Background: REAL ID Act. Congress passed the REAL ID Act in 2005, which established national standards for state-issued driver's licenses and personal identification cards. One of the requirements of the REAL ID Act is a state must verify the lawful presence within the United States of an applicant for a driver's license or identification card. Presently, Washington does not verify lawful presence in the United States of applicants for standard driver's licenses and identicards.

There are currently two state statutes that restrict the DOL from implementing the REAL ID Act until the following conditions are met:

- that certain data security measures and safeguards are in place;
- that the costs and recordkeeping burdens are not unreasonable on driver's license or identicard applicants; and
- that Washington has received federal funding to cover the cost of implementation.

State-issued driver's licenses or identification cards that do not comply with the requirements of the REAL ID Act may not be accepted by a federal agency for certain official purposes. The purposes covered by the Act are:

- accessing federal facilities, including military bases;
- entering nuclear power plants; and
- beginning January 22, 2018, boarding federally regulated commercial aircraft.

Washington is currently one of five states that are officially out of compliance with the REAL ID Act and are currently, or will soon be, subject to enforcement at certain federal facilities. Twenty other states are currently operating under an extension and twenty-five states are fully compliant with the REAL ID Act.

Generally, the standard driver's license costs $54 and is issued for a period of six years.

Enhanced Driver's License (EDL). In April 2005, the Departments of State and Homeland Security announced the Western Hemisphere Travel Initiative (WHTI), which required individuals entering or re-entering the United States to present a passport or other acceptable secure identification. The Legislature in 2007 authorized DOL to enter into a memorandum of understanding with a federal agency to facilitate border crossing between Washington and British Columbia, and to issue a voluntary EDL or enhanced identicard (EID). Under WHTI, EDL and EID are acceptable alternatives to a passport for re-entry into the U.S. at land and sea border crossings.

The EDL or EID may be issued to a Washington resident that is also a United States citizen if—in addition to meeting all standard driver's license application requirements—they have submitted proof of their identity, citizenship, and state residency, and successfully complete an in-person interview with a DOL licensing services employee. The cost of an EDL and EID is currently $108 and the documents are valid for a period of six years. EDL and EID contain a Radio Frequency Identification tag (RFID) like the one used in U.S. passports. The RFID tag contains a unique reference number that is used by U.S. border crossing stations.

The Transportation Security Administration lists EDL and EID as acceptable forms of identification for the purpose of boarding domestic commercial aircrafts.

Summary of Bill: Beginning July 1, 2018, DOL must mark the standard driver's licenses and identicards as required by federal law.

The fee for an enhanced driver's licenses and identicards is reduced to $90 for a period of four years. After the four-year period is over, the fee returns to $108.

The statutes prohibiting DOL's implementation of the REAL ID Act are repealed.

Staff Summary of Public Testimony: PRO: We have worked diligently on this issue and have tried to find the most simple method to address the challenge that REAL ID poses to our state. We have tried to work very hard with everyone who has had concerns with this bill and have tried to address those concerns.

This is a common sense approach. We want to minimize the impacts to the public seeking travel or access federal facilities. DOL has worked hard to put this together in a way that is as close to the way driver's license work today. We have tried to be transparent and communicative in developing this bill over the many years we have worked on this issue. This bill moves us towards REAL ID compliance. This bill will give us a 2 year compliance extension which gives Washington residents time to obtain an EDL or one of the many valid federal documents so that they can fly domestically.

The Port of Seattle supports this bill. The Port has had huge growth, in fact we have been the fastest growing airport in the country. We saw 45 million people come through SEATAC last year which means nearly 50,000 people per day. When you add the potential REAL ID enforcement impacts to the mix it is a recipe for a severe negative economic impact that will ripple outwards across the whole state. We urge its support moving forward.

The business community is concerned with the approaching REAL ID deadline and we support this bill as a positive step forward.

Washington is missing an opportunity to create a more technologically secure identity document.

This bill would help military families increase their quality of life. Their friends and family members cannot visit on base. The extension would help people gain access.

CON: The ACLU has due process, privacy, and data security concerns. Turning the standard driver's license into a true scarlet letter is not the way for Washington to go. DOL cannot confirm that we will get an extension if you pass this bill. This bill is not necessary for people to get an EDL and for people to use that EDL to fly domestically. The EDL already exists and will continue to be available even if you do not mark the standard license. One of the laws being repealed is about DOL certifying that there are certain data security and privacy issues in place prior to the state complying with REAL ID. Why should we repeal this? It is even more important now.

Marking licenses in any way that makes citizenship status clear can lead to racial profiling and discrimination. It can also lead to people making the choice not to obtain a license which means that people may not have proper driving training, get insurance, and can also cause them to fear any interaction with police. These are not good outcomes to the community. You are putting a bulls eye on their license. Please maintain the current system. It works and there is not real need to move towards REAL ID.
