SENATE COMMITTEE ON STATE GOVERNMENT

Staff: Samuel Brown (786-7470)

Background: In odd-numbered years, if state officers or measures are voted upon at a primary or general election, the state must pay counties a prorated share of the election costs. The state must also pay a prorated share of costs associated with elections held to fill a vacancy in the United States Senate or House of Representatives. The state reimburses counties for its share of election costs when applicable. Each county auditor apportions the state's share of election expenses, then files expense claims with the Secretary of State. The Secretary of State is required to include sufficient funds to reimburse the counties for the state share of election costs in its biennial budget, and appropriations must be made specifically for county reimbursement.

Summary of Bill: The state must reimburse counties for the state's prorated share of the costs of primary and general elections in even-numbered years.

Staff Summary of Public Testimony: PRO: If state races and officials are going to be on the ballot, the state should pay the costs. The current structure is burdensome for smaller counties. Counties have a structural revenue problem, and this bill gives them another tool in the toolbox to address this.
