SENATE COMMITTEE ON HEALTH CARE

Staff: Kathleen Buchli (786-7488)

Background: A vulnerable adult is a person 60 years of age or older who lacks the functional, physical, or mental ability to care for himself; an adult with a developmental disability; an adult with a legal guardian; an adult living in a long-term care facility such as an adult family home, boarding home, or nursing home; an adult living in the adult's own or family's home receiving services from an agency or contracted individual provider; or an adult self-directing the adult's own care.

Adult Protective Services (APS), located within the Department of Social and Health Services (DSHS), investigates reports of abandonment, abuse, neglect, and financial exploitation of vulnerable adults. If an investigator determines that abuse of the vulnerable adult has occurred, APS may offer protective services. If abuse is confirmed, APS will take steps to ensure the health and safety of the vulnerable adult. This may include having a case manager work with the vulnerable adult to determine what care services are needed and helping the vulnerable adult get those services—emergency shelter, food, medical care, counseling, or help moving if it is necessary—and follow-up to ensure the vulnerable adult is safe.

This analysis was prepared by non-partisan legislative staff for the use of legislative members in their deliberations. This analysis is not a part of the legislation nor does it constitute a statement of legislative intent.

APS may report the alleged abuser to law enforcement, help get an emergency protective order, an injunction to allow access to an alleged victim, or a referral for legal assistance. APS may also work with the Attorney General's Office to appoint a guardian.

Summary of Bill: Elder justice centers are senior-focused programs that provide a multidisciplinary approach to the prevention, investigation, prosecution, and treatment of abandonment, abuse, neglect, and financial exploitation of vulnerable adults.

DSHS must coordinate the implementation of an elder justice demonstration program to include establishing an Elder Justice Center in Spokane County and expanding the Elder Justice Center located in Clark County. As part of this coordination, DSHS and the counties must enter into memoranda of understanding or working agreements to prevent and investigate vulnerable adult abandonment, abuse, neglect, and financial exploitation. This includes coordination of services such as APS, law enforcement, prosecuting attorneys, victim advocates, guardianship program representatives, and a program coordinator.

DSHS must submit a series of three reports to the Governor and the Legislature, with the first report due January 10, 2018, and the last one due December 1, 2020. The December 1, 2020, report is a final report that will discuss the effectiveness of the elder justice center model in increasing community capacity to prevent and respond to issues relating to vulnerable adult abuse. The final report must also contain recommendations for modifying or expanding additional demonstration programs.

Staff Summary of Public Testimony: PRO: Too many seniors do not have the benefit of family or friends to help them when they are abused by a family member. Elder abuse is on the rise. This provides a solution to the national disgrace of elder abuse which includes financial abuse. There is an increase in reporting of elder abuse cases but many more go unreported. We support data collection and we need to collect and analyze data related to elder abuse. Investigations of elder abuse are complicated and they need dedicated people to staff these investigations. These investigations must be funded. Elder abuse leads to higher medical costs and more support for victims who may need income support after the abuse. Older people are more dependent on others and this leads to isolation. We see neglect and financial exploitation in cases of elder abuse; people are being manipulated by those people they thought they could trust. People become injured or die as a result of their abuse.
