Background: The Department of Social and Health Services (DSHS) provides direct client services to the public through a network of 54 local community services offices (CSOs). At a CSO, a person can access a number of services, including:

- applying for benefits or submitting documents;
- completing an interview for cash or food assistance;
- reporting changes for any of a recipient's benefits;
- Working Connections Child Care Services via phone or online portals; and

- WorkFirst/Social Services case management.

In CSOs there are computers available during regular business hours in office lobbies for DSHS business use, WorkSource Job Seeker and Washington Apple Healthcare.

Summary of Bill (First Substitute): Board of Advisors. A board of advisors is established at each local CSO to provide advice, guidance, and coordinate collaborations with community partners. Each board of advisors may:

- provide input into community services office operations;
- enhance community connections between the community services office and relevant sectors of the community;
- improve local accountability for the delivery of human services; and
- promote innovation.

The regional administrator for DSHS, or their designee, is to meet three times a year with each board of advisors in that region to present local data, trends, and recommendations. The regional administrator is to respond in writing to written questions and recommendations posed by the board of advisors, within thirty days.

The work of the board of advisors is intended to complement, not duplicate, local employment partnership councils.

Membership. The county legislative authority of the county where the CSO is located or, in the case of multiple counties, the county legislative authority of the county which contributes the highest population to the catchment area of the CSO is, in consultation with staff from the Economic Services Administration, appoints the following advisors to the board of advisors for each CSO to serve staggered, renewable three-year terms:

- a representative of each county and city government contained within the community services office catchment area;
- a representative from a local human services or housing nonprofit;
- a representative from the local business community;
- a client of the CSO with lived experience of homelessness or insecure housing;
- a local representative from the market rate housing developer community; and
- a representative of a local behavioral health provider.

If the catchment area of the community services office intersects with tribal land, the governor shall request that the tribe appoint a tribal representative to the board of advisors. Each board of advisors must also incorporate the state legislators who serve the community services office catchment area, as ex officio member, and the administrator of the CSO, as a nonvoting member.

Community services office means a local office within a region defined by DSHS which processes applications for public assistance.

EFFECT OF CHANGES MADE BY HUMAN SERVICES, REENTRY & REHABILITATION COMMITTEE (First Substitute): The Regional Administrator (RA), or their designee, is to meet with the Board of Advisors in the RA's region three times per year. The work of the Board of Advisors is intended to complement, not duplicate, the work of local employment partnership councils.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Available.

Creates Committee/Commission/Task Force that includes Legislative members: No.

Effective Date: Ninety days after adjournment of session in which bill is passed.

Staff Summary of Public Testimony on Original Bill: The committee recommended a different version of the bill than what was heard. PRO: CSOs provide great service and are an integral part of the state's strategy to reduce poverty. They have valuable connections and relationships with the community, but there is room for additional collaboration which is the idea behind having a Board of Advisors at all CSOs. We live in a network society, people want to be involved with government, and in government we need new ways to receive input. The Board of Advisors is a vehicle for feedback. Support of strategies to implement this idea while reducing the cost; such as three regional administrator meetings per year, instead of 12.

OTHER: The Community Services Division of the Economic Services Administration of DSHS, recognize the need to engage at the local level. Some people show up at CSOs for services the CSOs do not provide and they would like to do better. Community Services Division is working to transform the case management structure to make a broader community connection, and to better serve clients. CSOs are nationally recognized for their delivery of public assistance benefits; they are decreasing processing and wait times. There is a concern about how to manage input from local boards which could impact the statewide model. At the local level there are 27 local planning agencies (LPAs), which serves as a forum for delivery of services, although there is more of a WorkFirst focus. LPAs meet regularly, about six times a year, look at programs, and develop strategy plans. Local partners stay informed about policy this way. Many local planning agencies will develop pilots. In Snohomish, there is an expanded LPA with a partnership beyond WorkFirst/TANF, to human services providers who work with low-income individuals, local and state government representatives, local business, legal advocates, and health care. There are only three regions in ESD so it would take all of their time to prepare and participate in monthly board of advisor meetings in each of the local 54 CSOs.

Persons Testifying: PRO: Senator Hans Zeiger, Prime Sponsor.

OTHER: Babette Roberts, DSHS/ESA/CSD.
