Background: Working Connections Child Care. This federally and state-funded program provides child care subsidies to families with an income at or below 200 percent of the federal poverty level—$51,500 for a family of four. The state pays part of the cost of childcare when a parent is employed, self-employed, or in approved work activities unless the family has received child welfare, child protective, or family assessment response (FAR) services in the previous six months. The family is responsible for making a copayment to the child care provider based on the family's countable income.

Authorizations for a Working Connections Child Care (WCCC) subsidy are effective for 12 months. DCYF must manage the program, so the average monthly caseload does not exceed 33,000 households and must give access to the program based on priorities specified in the budget.

WCCC is partially funded by the federal Child Care and Development Fund (CCDF). CCDF rules allow states to designate certain vulnerable populations as in need of protective services. Work and income requirements may be waived for these populations. Washington's definition of protective services includes families who are homeless during the designated four-month grace period, children who are homeless because of a disaster, children receiving FAR services, and children in the parental control of a nonneedy relative.

DCYF rules provide that families experiencing homelessness are eligible for a four-month homeless grace period. These families have four months to provide verification of participation in approved activities and other information.

McKinney-Vento Homeless Assistance Act. This federal law provides funding to states to support programs serving students experiencing homelessness. It defines "homeless children" as individuals who lack a fixed, regular, and adequate nighttime residence.

Summary of Bill: The bill as referred to committee not considered.

Summary of Bill (First Substitute): DCYF must designate homeless children and Indian children as vulnerable populations pursuant to federal law to allow eligibility and 12-month authorizations for WCCC subsidies for homeless children and Indian children.

DCYF must consult with tribal representatives to develop an agreed-upon definition of Indian child by July 1, 2020, and adopt the definition in rule. Homeless means without a fixed, regular, and adequate nighttime residence as defined by McKinney-Vento.

EFFECT OF CHANGES MADE BY EARLY LEARNING & K-12 EDUCATION COMMITTEE (First Substitute):

- Removes language adding homeless children and Indian children as eligible children for the Early Childhood Education and Assistance Program.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Requested on February 1, 2019.

Creates Committee/Commission/Task Force that includes Legislative members: No.

Effective Date: Ninety days after adjournment of session in which bill is passed.

Staff Summary of Public Testimony on Proposed Substitute: The committee recommended a different version of the bill than what was heard. PRO: This bill would provide stability and additional support to some of the most vulnerable families in the state. Homeless children and tribal children are among the least likely to be ready for kindergarten. Native children, regardless of income, have many risk factors. If these children attend ECEAP, a high quality early learning environment, they are more likely to be ready. Tribes that are currently offering ECEAP are considering closing these programs because their children are not eligible. This bill extends the four-month grade period for homeless families to twelve months. Housing programs can take longer than four months.

Persons Testifying: PRO: Senator Joe Nguyen, Prime Sponsor; Melanie Smith, Wellspring Family Services; Katy Warren, Washington State Association of Headstart and ECEAP; Nigel Lawrence, The Suquamish Tribe; Sarah Brady, Child Care Resources.

Persons Signed In To Testify But Not Testifying: No one.
