EFFECT: Specifies that a voter utilizing automatic voter registration at the Department of Licensing is considered registered to vote as of the time that an election official receives their information, not as of the date of the transaction. Clarifies that a person who has been automatically registered to vote must decline registration in a reply that is received by the auditor within 15 days in order to be deemed never to have registered to vote. Specifies what auditors must do when they receive replies declining to register to vote after the 15-day deadline. Makes a nonsubstantive change to provisions related to questions asked by agency service providers.
