Background:

Business and Occupation Tax.

Washington's major business tax is the business and occupation (B&O) tax. The B&O tax is imposed on the gross receipts of business activities conducted within the state without any deduction for the costs of doing business. Businesses must pay the B&O tax even though they may not have any profits or may be operating at a loss.

A taxpayer may have more than one B&O tax rate, depending on the types of activities conducted. Major B&O tax rates are 0.471 percent for retailing; 0.484 percent for manufacturing, wholesaling, and extracting; and 1.5 percent (businesses with taxable income of less than $1 million) or 1.75 percent (businesses with taxable income of $1 million or more) for services and for activities not classified elsewhere. Several preferential rates also apply to specific business activities.

In addition, a taxpayer may be eligible to utilize other tax preferences, including credits and deductions, to reduce their tax liability.

Tax Rates Applicable to Child Care Services.

In general, businesses providing child care for periods of less than 24 hours are subject to a preferential tax rate of 0.484 percent of gross receipts. However, income received by nursery schools, preschools, child care providers, and privately operated kindergartens for the care or education of children who are under 8 years of age and not enrolled in or above the first grade is exempt from the B&O tax.

Tax Preference Performance Statement.

State law provides for a range of tax preferences that confer reduced tax liability upon a designated class of taxpayer. Tax preferences include tax exclusions, deductions, exemptions, preferential tax rates, deferrals, and credits. Legislation that establishes or expands a tax preference must include a Tax Preference Performance Statement that identifies the public policy objective of the preference, as well as specific metrics that the Joint Legislative Audit and Review Committee can use to evaluate the effectiveness of the preference. All new tax preferences automatically expire after 10 years unless an alternative expiration date is provided.

Summary of Amended Bill:

From October 1, 2024, until January 1, 2035, the current B&O tax exemption for child care services is extended to apply to amounts received for the care and supervision for periods of less than 24 hours of children who are under the age of 13, or who are under the age of 19 and have a verified special need or are under court supervision.

A tax preference performance statement is required, with the stated public policy objective of reducing the costs associated with providing child care by expanding the B&O tax exemption for child care services to include income derived from the child care and education of children up to age 12.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Available.

Effective Date: The bill takes effect on October 1, 2024.

Staff Summary of Public Testimony (Human Services, Youth, & Early Learning):

(In support) The rising cost of child care is a significant concern. There is a gap between supply and demand that increases the already high price for child care. This bill will encourage the opening of more child care businesses, which in turn will increase supply and lower the cost. The cost of child care is higher than college tuition, and student parents are struggling to keep up with expenses and also pay for child care. Every little bit of help in this area is a lifeline. This bill brings providers closer to breaking even. Providers are operating at a loss and are having to spend reserves to keep programs afloat. The pandemic was a tipping point for many providers, and 25 percent of providers on the Olympic Peninsula closed during that time. For the vitality of the economy, it is important to remove barriers that currently exist for working parents trying to access care and providers trying to operate businesses.

(Opposed) None.

Staff Summary of Public Testimony (Finance):

(In support) The entire State of Washington is a child care desert which means the need for child care outweighs the availability of child care. This prevents parents from entering or returning to the workforce. Child care is integral to the economic recovery and vitality of Washington communities. During the pandemic, the Olympic Peninsula lost 25 percent of its child care providers. Many providers are operating at a loss. The absence of support for child care by the Legislature has led to undue financial strain on child care facilities across the state. This bill will help providers break even in the operation of their facilities. Every child deserves access to equitable opportunity for optimal development. It is essential to support providers so that future leaders of our local and global communities receive the developmental support they deserve. This bill is especially important because it focuses on children with learning impairments and special needs. This bill will help families, children, and providers.

(Opposed) None.
