Background: In partnership with the University of Washington Evans School, the Henry M. Jackson Foundation, and the Ruckelshaus Center, the Office of the Lieutenant Governor established the Project for Civic Health. The project seeks to bring together people who are concerned about civic health, to improve governance, to develop practical and transformative ideas, and to create public accountability.

This analysis was prepared by non-partisan legislative staff for the use of legislative members in their deliberations. This analysis is not part of the legislation nor does it constitute a statement of legislative intent.

The project began by convening roundtable discussions in five Washington counties with elected officials and community leaders. The roundtable discussions have been formalized into a report titled Common Ground for the Common Good.

Following the report, community and political leaders from across Washington gathered as part of a Civic Health Project Summit on October 19, 2023. The purpose of the summit was to think through how to uncover shared objectives and build ways to strengthen abilities to debate, discuss, and develop better solutions to civic health issues.

Staff Summary of Public Testimony: PRO: Being an American involves the embrace of high ideals and civic responsibility. That is the work we hope to accomplish with this resolution. Americans believe civility is a problem, many are concerned about the future of our democracy, and some have even ceased talking to a friend or family member because of politics. We need the Legislature's help. Many of the causes of civic disfunction may warrant legislative action, your examination, for example, enhanced civic education, improved training for local elected officials, or supporting local journalism. Our Legislature is a good example of how people can treat each other with respect in the public square.

Persons Testifying: PRO: Senator John Lovick, Prime Sponsor; Elizabeth Doll; Jodi Sandfort, Evans School of Public Policy & Governance, UW, Dean; Denny Heck, Lieutenant Governor.

Persons Signed In To Testify But Not Testifying: No one.
