SB 5104

---

As of January 17, 2025

Title: An act relating to protecting employees from coercion in the workplace based on immigration status.

Brief Description: Protecting employees from coercion in the workplace based on immigration status.

Sponsors: Senators Hasegawa, Bateman, Conway, Nobles, Saldaña, Stanford, Valdez, Wellman and Wilson, C..

Brief History:

Committee Activity: Labor & Commerce: 1/20/25.

Brief Summary of Bill

- Imposes a civil penalty on an employer that coerces an employee based on an employee's or an employee's family member's immigration status in furtherance of the employer committing a violation of wage payment or condition of labor requirements.
- Requires the Department of Labor and Industries to investigate complaints of coercion by employers.

SENATE COMMITTEE ON LABOR & COMMERCE

Staff: Marlon Llanes (786-7423)

Background: The Wage Payment Act authorizes a person owed wages to file a wage complaint with the Department of Labor and Industries (L&I). L&I must investigate the complaint and issue either a citation and notice of assessment or a determination of compliance. A citation and notice of assessment state that a violation of wage payment requirements has occurred and impose a fine. A determination of compliance states that a violation has not occurred.

If L&I determines an employer has violated a wage payment requirement and issues a citation and notice of assessment to the employer, L&I may order the employer to pay the employee all wages owed. If L&I determines the violation of the wage payment requirement was willful or intentional, L&I may also impose civil penalties on the employer. The minimum for a civil penalty is $1,000 or 10 percent of the total amount of unpaid wages, whichever is greater, and the maximum is $20,000.

The Industrial Welfare Act contains a number of labor standards, such as the Family Care Act and child labor laws. It is also the authority for L&I's rules on meals and rest breaks. Employees must generally be allowed paid rest periods of at least ten minutes for every four hours worked, and at least 30 minutes for a meal period for every five hours worked.

In 2020, Washington State passed a law to amend the Washington Law Against Discrimination to include citizenship or immigration status as a protected class for discrimination claims. Employers are prohibited from using a worker's national origin, immigration status, or citizenship as a basis for, among other things, hiring and promoting.

In 2024, the state of New Jersey passed a law imposing a civil penalty on an employer who coerces an employee based on the immigration status of the employee in furtherance of a violation of employment, labor-related, or other laws.

Summary of Bill: The bill as referred to committee not considered.

Summary of Bill (Proposed Substitute): An employer that coerces an employee in furtherance of the employer committing a violation of wage payment or condition of labor requirements is subject to a civil penalty, in addition to any other penalty that may be imposed by L&I for those violations.

"Coercion" means a threat to compel or induce a person to engage in conduct which the person has a legal right to abstain from, or to abstain from conduct in which the person has a legal right to engage in.

"Threat" means any implicit or explicit communication specifically pertaining to an employee's or an employee's family member's immigration status made by the employer to deter an employee from engaging in protected activities or exercising a right under state law.

A worker subject to coercion by an employer may file a complaint with L&I within 180 days of the coercive action. L&I must investigate the complaint and issue either a citation and notice of assessment or a determination of compliance no later than 90 days after L&I receives the complaint.

L&I must assess a civil penalty for each coercive act found to be a violation. The maximum penalties are:

- $1,000 for the first violation;
- $5,000 for a second violation; and
- $10,000 for any subsequent violation.

Each act of coercion against each affected employee counts as a separate violation. Beginning July 1, 2028, L&I must adjust the penalties for inflation every three years.

Citations and notices of assessment or determinations of compliance may be appealed by filing a notice of appeal with the director of L&I within 30 days of L&I's decision.
